

Dimensional Cliffs 3

By Davidfish

The finale to Lunar's journey

Summary

With Kithara taken out and the wonder power being handed over to Dr. Gates, a new dimensional portal gun has been created for Lunar to use. After some testing, he and his friends are ready to find the guardian of the dimensions and find out what was the common event that is causing the voids to appear. Their hunt takes them through various dimensions before finding the correct one with the guardian. The heroes will learn who the guardian really is, and what is the source of all life in every dimension. Upon learning why the chaos is all happening, the heroes try a solution, but it ends up speeding up the voids and bringing doom to every dimension. To stop the madness, sacrifices will have to be made, as well as creating alliances with old foes from the past. Everyone will have a part to play to save every person across the dimensions.

Book Information

Dimensional Cliffs will end the dimensional journey Lunar has gone through, and also conclude his story. There will be no more books about Lunar after. I have taken ideas again, but it will all be put to good use for a good story. Since it is the last book, I've tried my best to include every single character featured to create a banger ending to a series. There will be many familiar faces and unlikely alliances to be made in this book. I still can't believe I'm going to have written 9 books, and it all started off one day in high school. If you have actually read all the previous 8 books in this series, thank you. Each book represents a part of my life, and I was happy to share it all.

Chapter I (Lunar's POV): Voids are Rough

"Alright I think I got this one almost closed up," I said.

I was at Max's lab helping to close up newly created voids that appeared today. We were lucky that each void wasn't growing in size. With the modified super merge, I was able to use it to close anything up.

"It kinda looks cool in there, what do you think is in there?" asked Solar.

"Probably the same thing a black hole would have if I had to guess," said Max.

"I hope it hasn't been too hard on you Solar," I said.

"It's all good. It's been slowing down recently to be honest. But that is probably because more people are starting to see them. We had to fix some in the city already," she said.

"Really? Oh dear. We will fix this as soon as possible!" I said.

"I don't think I've heard the whole story yet. What are you guys waiting for right now?" asked Max.

"Dr. Gates is creating some sort of dimension gun similar to your rift one. It'll let us go to random dimensions. We'll use it to find the guardian somehow," I said.

"Ah I see. You know this whole dimension thing is still really cool to me. Like the wonder power Solar told me about sounds fascinating. I wonder how my copy there is using it," said Max.

"Oh yeah we had some wacky experiences during our time there. It was definitely fun, but also tiring," said Solar.

"You two have been through a lot these past few years. I'm proud of both of you," he said.

"Aw thanks," said Solar.

"Well we're happy to have one of the best parental figures out there," I said.

"Aha yes that is also true. One day I'll have to stop managing the lab," he said.

"What!? But who will take over?" asked Solar.

"Depends on who is passionate and trustworthy enough. I will have to do some research," he said.

We finished up our conversation and closed up the void in the lab. It was a good thing it didn't spawn in a public area, or else we would've had to close the lab center. As we were walking back to the lobby, I saw a new room that was never there before. It looked interesting.

"Max, what is this room all about?" I asked.

"Oh! Lunar that is something I want to try on you one day maybe," said Max.

"Huh? What do you mean?" I asked.

"A machine and set of tools I've been working on. Should you ever want to return to your AI form, I can try fixing you up somehow. It would be hard since everyone inside you was fried from the EMP bomb, but we can try to make it work," said Max.

That actually sounded pretty cool. Being a human was kinda cool but also exhausting. Having my AI self back would make life pretty darn nice again.

"That sounds awesome Max. I'll definitely let you know," I said.

That debate was still something on my mind. Who really was I? Was I supposed to be a human or an AI? I've been through both sides and it seems so conflicting. Not to mention which side my friends like me better. I never really got to know. Either way, I probably shouldn't worry about this too much. There were other voids not too far in the city that needed closing, including one right at the Spark Researchers' lab. We made sure to grab Orion too, as things could get messy.

"So what is going on with this void stuff I keep hearing about?" he asked.

"Don't worry too much about it Orion. We may have done something to cause it, but we'll get to the bottom of it!" said Solar.

"Fair enough. I will be ready to assist," he said.

Once we got there, Clara greeted us.

"Hey you guys! Good to see you all again," she said.

"So nice to see you too Clara! This is Max and Orion. You've never met them, but they are nice," said Solar.

"Yes well, I do take care of them as my own children," said Max.

"Uh he doesn't mean me as well," said Orion.

"Haha that's funny. The problem is inside, come on in!" she said.

We followed her inside to take a closer look. Things looked really bright inside. The Sparks here seemed to be much more advanced than the last time I saw them. She brought us over to a larger room where Midnite and Bedrock were.

"Oh hey friends! Thanks for coming," said Midnite.

Bedrock did a wave gesture.

"Oh my god, it's so big," said Solar.

"Sure is. This void spawned right above the new device we were to test. Bedrock is furious about it," said Midnite.

"I think we can handle it. Orion I need a hand," I said.

"Right is good," I replied.

I took out the enhanced super merge and set it to void closing mode. Orion grabbed onto it to make sure it was stable. The void started to close, but I knew we had some time to kill.

"So what have you guys been up to with the Sparks?" I asked.

"Well, we've been working on using it for energy of course. It doesn't need darkness, but now after some experiments, we've managed to get Sparks to a level of energy they would have if they were in the darkness world," said Clara.

"Damn, that sounds awesome. So what's this device in particular?" asked Solar.

"A new weapon we wanted to test out. Nothing is certain, so we have to be prepared," said Clara.

"I like that sound of that," said Orion.

The super merge started to become a bit unstable. Orion was having a hard time holding onto it. Bedrock noticed and went to help him.

"Heh, thanks again," said Orion.

"He's tough, but he's a sweetheart," said Midnite.

Bedrock rolled his eyes. Soon enough, the void finally closed, and revealed the device.

"It's so majestic," said Solar.

“Sure is! I’ll be the one using it. If you ever want to see it in action let me know!” said Clara.

“So you guys know why these voids are appearing?” asked Midnite.

“Unfortunately we do. We broke some sort of common event apparently. I’m waiting on someone else from another dimension to help us fix it,” I said.

“I think it has to do with me, but now the visions have become real and everyone is seeing the voids. We can’t wait too long,” said Solar.

After that, my communication device rang. Wonder Dr. Gates sent me a message. The dimension gun was ready for use.

“Speak of that, he’s got it ready,” I said.

“How exciting,” said Clara.

“I think we’ll have to go now, but it was nice seeing you guys again!” said Solar.

“Of course! Come back anytime. If you ever need help with anything let us know,” said Midnite.

With that, we left and headed back to the lab. I was a little nervous for the trip ahead, but I knew it had to be done.

Chapter II (Lunar’s POV): Hopping Through Space

Once we got back to the lab, Solar and I geared up.

“Before you guys go, I just want to say how proud I am of both of you. It was an honor to make you guys,” said Max.

“Aw Max. We love you too!” said Solar.

We gathered for a group hug. Afterwards, Solar and I rifted back to Dr. Gates’ lab, where he was waiting for us.

“Ready to go?” he asked.

“As ready as we’ll ever be,” I said.

“Good good. Be careful still out there. Other dimensions might not be as friendly as the Wonder one,” he said.

We took his advice and hopped through the dimension portal. Wonder Dr. Gates was there to greet us.

“Welcome back guys!” he said.

“Feels nice to be here again. Any news?” I asked.

“Nothing too special. The government has been a bit more open about wonder power. Some parts of the public might be able to test it while observed of course,” he said.

Audrey walked to join us.

“What’s up guys?” she asked.

“Doing pretty good,” said Solar.

“Audrey wants to join you guys and explore the other dimension, assuming that is ok with you?” said Dr. Gates.

“Of course! Anyone is free to come with us. We might need the help,” I said.

“If that’s the case, our college wants to come as well,” she said.

Louis immediately rushed into the room right after.

“Heard I could come. Let’s go!” he said.

“I suppose you have enough training. Now time to reveal what is going to get you guys there,” said Dr. Gates.

He brought us into a new special room in the lab. In the center was a special gun stored in a bullet proof glass casing. Dr. Gates took it out.

“With all the fresh Wonder Power, I created something similar to your rift gun. It can create a dimension portal right in front of your eyes that will link to another random one. However, after you discover a dimension, the gun will save a setting so you can return to that dimension again,” he said.

He handed the gun to me. This thing was a lot heavier than the rift guns, but still very cool.

“Thank you. We’ll make sure we use it well!” I said.

“Haha I know you all will. Of course it has a save back to our dimension. Use it to get out of safety in case you land somewhere hostile,” he said.

“We got this boss. You can count on us,” said Louis.

“Excellent. Why don’t you guys use it right now? I can watch it first hand,” he said. I powered up the gun and shot a portal open just like I would with my rift. The newly spawned portal was full of power, and it almost took down the room.

“Wow, I’m glad it didn’t break,” said Dr. Gates.

“This is so cool!” said Solar.

“Looking good. So this is safe?” I asked.

“I’m sure of it. If you need any help, come back right away,” he said.

We looked at each other one last time before hopping through. The feeling was way stronger than a rift portal. I guess it makes sense since we were jumping to a whole other dimension. I could barely open my eyes until we reached the other side. We landed in some field, but it wasn’t anything I could recognize.

“Wow! This is awesome,” said Louis.

“I don’t sense anything strange so far. We’ll have to find the gimmick of this dimension another way,” said Audrey.

We started to walk in a direction looking for any clues. Something was off though, I didn’t feel like we were in any nearby civilization. Eventually we came across a path that seemed to lead somewhere.

“So how does it feel to be at the root of the voids?” asked Audrey.

“Kinda weird. It’s been getting better but at the start oh boy was it rough. Luckily Lunar was there to comfort me but we should solve it soon,” said Solar.

“You know, I was always told to just play it safe. Maybe we can do it this way too,” said Louis.

After a while the path took us to some broken down city.

“This place looks rough. Wonder what happened,” I said.

We didn’t have to wait much longer for answers. These robots out of nowhere with lethal weapons came to greet us. They didn’t look friendly either. But they did look familiar. Too familiar.

“Wait a second, these look like Mojang’s robots that were turned into O-Rez ones. Yes they are!” I said.

“What are you talking about?” asked Solar.

“Remember that story? When I took down Evil Lunar he had these bots with him. But if they are here then...” I started to say.

My guess was as good as right. This was a dimension where he had more control supposedly. The man himself came to greet himself soon enough, guarded by a bunch of robots.

“Lunar!? I thought I got rid of you already!?” he said.

Well this was kinda awkward. He must be talking about the Lunar from this dimension.

“Uh, kinda weird but I’m a Lunar from a different dimension. I took you down before!” I said.

“Huh, this wasn’t part of my plans. Either way, I will take you down no matter which Lunar you are!” said Evil Lunar.

“Wait, we can’t let him do this again,” I said.

His robots started to corner us again. It was deja vu. Luckily I had new friends with me for this old foe.

“Pfft, he’s got nothing on us,” said Solar.

A single blast from her weapon was enough to take out a couple bots easily. Talk about collateral damage. Audrey chimed in with some of her own wonder power, which shrunk the horde as well.

“You are truly someone different Lunar. Well, you must know about this then!” said Evil Lunar.

He pulled out his merge cannon. It looked about the same from when I last dealt with it. I stepped forwards and did the same trick I did before to launch the cannon ball right at him again.

“Wow, that was awesome!” said Louis.

“No biggie,” I said.

He got back up mad.

“Alright then. I have something you may or may not have seen,” he said.

Evil Lunar opened a huge rift in the sky. Just like what he did before. Not as big as the one before, but large enough to hurdle a giant space rock towards us.

“Heh, I got this,” said Louis.

He whistled and called in his wonder guardian. It came charging in knocking any bots out of the way. They used their weapon to knock the rock right back towards Evil Lunar. I felt like he had enough by now.

“Louis, good work,” said Audrey.

“Guardian for the win!” he replied.

Still, Evil Lunar had the energy to get back up but way weaker.

“Alright. I see what I’m dealing with now,” he said before collapsing.

“We really smurfed on him,” I said.

“I think we should look in another dimension. This one doesn’t seem to have many clues,” said Solar.

“Sounds good to me. I can open another dimension,” I said.

I opened another portal and we all hopped in. Hopefully the Lunar here has an easier time dealing with his evil counterpart now.

“We didn’t do any big damage did we?” I asked.

“Probably not. As long as we didn’t break any common events,” said Audrey.

“But we have no idea what counts as one!” said Solar.

“Oh well, let’s just hope!” said Audrey.

We finally landed in the new dimension. All I could say is that I felt like I landed in a flat area. Like really flat.

Chapter III (Lunar’s POV): Paper Space

So there was a lot to discover. First of all, everything in this dimension was made of paper or other cardboard like materials. Most objects were flat.

“Oh I’ve heard about this dimension before! I’ve always wanted to visit it,” said Audrey.

“Really? What’s so interesting about paper,” said Louis.

“It’s just such a unique space. Our counterparts probably live such a cool life,” said Audrey.

“Well for now we should just find out where the heck we are. This place is just another empty field again,” I said.

“Should I be worried? I literally operate on fire!” said Solar.

“Don’t worry. From what I researched, this paper isn’t as flammable as you think,” said Audrey.

It definitely was more durable then I would’ve thought. There were no signs of tearage or anything like that. Even the creatures here were made up of paper. Seeing them walk around and stuff was so cool to see, but also a little weird.

“That’s a place right there surely right?” said Louis.

We looked ahead and saw some signs of some cities. It didn’t look like it was under destruction, so hopefully no villains were there.

“Let’s go!” said Solar.

We picked up the pace and entered the city grounds. Unfortunately Solar ran a bit too fast and ran into someone.

“Oops I’m so sorry!” she said.

The other paper person got up.

“Argh, you’re heavier than I thought. Huh, you look familiar though. Despite the 3D shape,” he said.

I had no idea what he was talking about. Until I realized, it was Max! Just from this world.

“Woah woah. Are you Max?” I asked.

“Funny that you know my name. Who are you guys?” he asked.

“Max it’s us! Solar and Lunar!” said Solar.

“I mean, you guys do look just like them. But they went underground on a mission I sent them on not long ago,” he said.

Damn, so they were on the Alterna quest now. I hope they are ok.

“We’re from another dimension. Hard to believe I know, but we are trying to find the dimension with the guardian. I know you don’t know us exactly, but maybe you can help?” He thought about it for a moment.

“Well, this is all so very strange. But you seem like a Lunar and I have seen hints of voids here too. I will help you guys out. Let’s go to my lab though,” he said.

“Woohoo! Thanks Max,” said Audrey.

“Yeah of course. I’m not sure who you are but I guess my self from your dimension does,” said Paper Max.

“You’re so thin here! How does it feel?” I asked.

“Well, I feel ‘normal’. Just like you I could ask the same about how it feels to be in 3D,” he said.

We quickly walked over to the lab. It looked about the same, but the walls were made of cardboard here. Even the doors as well.

“Come inside, there’s an event today so it’ll be a little busy,” he said.

We went inside and made our way past the crowd. Some gave some weird looks at us since we weren’t paper, but Max ensured to them that all was good. Eventually we made it to his office. Just like the one I know.

“They’ll not worry as long as I’m the one doing the ensuring. Anyways let’s get down to business. What common event did you break?” asked Paper Max.

“We don’t know exactly. All we know is that it’s tied to Solar and I possibly. The voids have been in our dimension for a while now,” I said.

“Now that you mention it, I have seen some around here too, which is really unusual,” he said.

“If they are present in your dimension now, then it’s starting to speed up. We need to find the guardian as soon as possible,” said Audrey.

“Hm I see. I have some idea of the guardian’s dimension. From my research, it is in shambles as of right now. Destroyed by some unknown sources. But yet, he would be there still,” he said.

“Huh, how do you know all this?” asked Audrey.

“Some old publishings by Dr. Gates. I assume you guys know him. He wrote about it a long time ago before I was alive. I mean, it was 273 years ago or something,” he said.

“The Dr. Gates we know made us this dimension portal gun that lets us travel to random dimensions,” I said.

“I see. It will take too long if it’s random. There are too many dimensions out there,” said Paper Max.

“Before we landed in this one we were in one where Evil Lunar was still wreaking havoc,” I said.

“Oh wow. He’s gone in this one for sure. We sent him into orbit!” said Paper Max.

“Sheesh,” said Solar.

“I can propose a solution to track this dimension. But I can’t do it here. What I was thinking of was using a heating monitor to track the dimensions out there and find the one with the highest readings, since the destruction was very hot according to the research. But here, we can’t let anything too hot happen or the paper will burn,” he said.

“Oh I know! We can take you back to our dimension. You will be able to work there,” I said.

“Huh, is that safe for me? I have no idea what it would be like if I left here,” he said.

“We have wonder power! We can protect you even if something goes wrong,” said Audrey.

“Wonder power huh. I’ve heard about that dimension. Looks like you guys have a lot of it,” he said.

“We sure do!” said Louis.

“Alright, for the sake of all dimensions, I will come help you guys out,” he said.

“Let’s go!” said Solar.

“I’ll just tell my children here that I’ll be gone for a bit. They will be fine,” he said.

“Trust me, they will be,” I said.

With that, I opened the dimension portal to take us back to my dimension again. Dr. Gates is going to want to see this.

Chapter IV (Lunar’s POV): The Very First One

The dimension portal opened right back at Dr. Gates’ lab.

“Welcome back guys! Oh, I see you brought back someone new,” he said.

“This is Max. We know him here too, he was our creator,” I said.

“Pleased to meet you. This place feels a bit weird but I will be ok,” said Paper Max.

“Is he made of paper?” asked Dr. Gates.

“Oh yeah he is. We were in a paper dimension!” said Audrey.

“I see. Well that should be ok. Just don’t let the general public notice. I don’t want to cause a stir. The voids have already been doing so,” he said.

This shocked me. I didn’t expect the voids to be here either.

“They’re here too?” asked Solar.

“Unfortunately. There’s been little damage right now but I worry that it will speed up sooner rather than later,” he said.

“We’ll stop it soon I promise,” I said.

I’m not sure how exactly yet but I’m sure Paper Max’s idea can work out.

“Well I can share how my idea works now and hopefully we can stop this mess. It involves a device that connects to the dimension space somehow. But it takes lots of heat energy to work due to the specifics of the space material, which is why I cannot make it in the paper dimension. But here, it seems like everything is solid enough to do. All I need is a workspace with some mechanics in it,” he said.

That gave me an idea. We did happen to know a mechanic.

“Hey, we know a mechanic. Her name is Cherry!” said Solar.

“Oh you’re so right. Let’s go visit Cherry again. I miss her!” said Audrey.

“Maybe I should go this time as well. I want to see this project take place,” said Dr. Gates.

“Alright sounds solid!” I said.

We contacted Cherry and let her know we were on the way. The walk wasn’t bad but it was hot and Paper Max was definitely feeling the heat. Audrey used some wonder power to change up the weather.

“Wow, this place is really dangerous for paper,” he said.

“It’s ok Max. It’s not like this all the time. Sometimes it rains,” said Solar.

“That would be even worse for me!” he said.

Soon enough we made it to Cherry’s garage. She opened it up for us.

“Hi guys!” she said.

“Cherry!” said Solar.

She went to give her a hug.

“I’ve heard I could be of some assistance. Woah, is that guy made of paper!?” asked Cherry.

“Are you really that surprised after seeing what wonder power is like?” asked Audrey.

“Well, fair point I really shouldn’t be surprised,” said Cherry.

“This is a nice garage Cherry. Anyways, I have plans for a device that can potentially work to find this special guardian dimension based on my research. I just couldn’t do it in the paper world, but here, there is a chance,” said Paper Max.

“Yeah sure thing! Let me know what you need or what assistance. And I can help too,” she said.

“Sounds good. Right now I need...” he started to say.

Max started to list a bunch of parts and gizmos which I had no idea what they meant. Cherry knew what he needed and started to go find them.

“Sorry Max, I don’t have the Thermatrix RadiantCore. I don’t think that exists here,” she said.

“Ah right my apologies. That piece was made maybe 150 years ago from the time I lived in. It was actually discontinued way before I was born,” said Paper Max.

“How are paper people born?” asked Dr. Gates.

“Uh, it’s complicated. Anyways, without this part I can’t start the device. It revolves around this part,” he said.

We were stuck for now, and we had not enough wonder power to create a part that we had no idea what it looked like or does.

“Wait, 150 years ago? From the time you were born. Lunar we can just visit delta earth for that!” said Solar.

“There were only 5 in history ever made in my dimension. We better hope it’s more here,” said Paper Max.

“Maybe I’ll stay here for now then. This rift thing isn’t for me exactly. Cherry, can I wait for you guys in the garage?” asked Dr. Gates.

“Of course! Make yourself at home. But I’m going with those guys. I need some more adventure,” said Cherry.

“Awesome. Ok the rift is open. Let’s hop in,” I said.

We all hopped through and landed back right outside Mojang. I had told Oona that we were coming.

“Back so soon already huh. You brought some new people I see!” she said.

“Yeah this is Cherry, Audrey, Louis, and Max. Great people,” I said.

“Sounds neat. Wait, is that guy made of paper? What’s up?” she asked.

Oh yeah, this is Paper Max, from another dimension. You remember Max right? He helped us take care of Dimentio.

“Hm, he does look like him. Just weird to see the 2D shape,” said Oona.

“That’s all good. We are here to look for a part. There’s only 5 in my dimension. We need a Thermatrix RadiantCore,” said Paper Max.

“Damn, that has been big news recently. The first one is being made in some factory. I think it’s complete but it’s being heavily guarded,” said Oona.

“God, but we need that part!” said Solar.

“The good news is that the company who wants to buy it is really evil. They have plans to fast track fossil fuels with it. I wouldn’t feel guilty if they were stopped as long as nobody was caught in the process,” said Oona.

“So we can just bust in and grab it. Let’s put up a fight!” said Louis.

“I’m not sure if that’s the case. It’s better to do a sneakier approach if you’re going to try to steal. The part is larger than you think, and there is surveillance everywhere. Once they find your faces, they will not stop hunting you down,” she said.

“Damn it’s that serious. We don’t have many ways of getting quiet. Wonder power is really loud,” said Audrey.

I thought we were stuck yet again, but then Solar proposed a really crazy idea.

“Guys, didn’t we get someone arrested here before. Someone who is really sneaky?” she said.

“You mean we should ask Radar!? Are you sure Solar?” I asked.

“It’s been a while, maybe he’s had a change of heart. Plus, do we have any other options?” she asked.

“I don’t know who this Radar guy is, but maybe we can ask,” said Paper Max. Radar was really hard to deal with, but Solar is right. We didn’t have much of an option. It was worth a shot.

“Alright, it can’t be that bad. Where is he being held?” I asked.

“There’s a local prison not too far from here. I can take you guys right there,” said Oona.

“Sounds great thank you,” said Audrey.

“So how long has he been in jail for now?” asked Solar.

“Probably at least a year since you were last here. His sentence isn’t very long but he should still be there,” said Oona.

Oona offered to drive us all the way to the prison. The check in process was a bit tedious but soon we were able to walk right up to the jail cell. The only problem was that Radar wasn’t there when we got there. There was a hidden hole in the ground of his cell.

Chapter V (Lunar’s POV): Runaways

We made sure to whisper the entire time we talked about the situation.

“He’s gone!!? But they said he was right here!” said Solar.

“He must’ve dipped while they weren’t looking. We need to go after him,” I said.

“We have no idea where he would’ve gone though,” said Audrey.

“The hole in the cell is probably our best bet. We should take it and carve the path to him,” I said.

“But we can’t enter the cell. We have no key, and a rift in would be way too loud,” said Oona.

We tried looking around for a solution but there was honestly not much any of us could do given the amount of security. I thought it was lost, but then Paper Max had an idea. He turned sideways and walked through the bars given he was a thin sheet of paper.

“Max, wait, you’re so smart!” I said.

“Yeah, those are some of the cool tricks I can do. I also know how to do this,” he said. He crumbled his hand small and put it in the lock, which then unlocked the door for the rest of us.

“Damn, now I wish I was made of paper!” said Louis.

“Trust me, you don’t,” said Paper Max.

We jumped down the hole to try to find Radar. To be honest I was quite impressed with him. The tunnel was pretty comfortable to walk through. Looks like he’s been working on it for months.

“The design is quite nice I’ll say that,” said Audrey.

There were no signs of the tunnel so all we could do was just continue down the path. Radar sure was consistent with his work. I’m surprised that the police haven’t caught on to this tunnel yet. After some more walking, we felt a quick breeze push on us. Someone was here.

“Is that him?” asked Solar.

The breezes kept coming in as if someone was running circles around us. Soon, someone stepped in front of us.

“Been a while,” he said.

Radar didn’t look like he was getting much sleep, still he had the speed we needed.

“Radar! It has indeed been a while,” I said.

“What are you and your friends doing here?” he asked.

“We uh. Well we need your help. It’s for something serious. Voids level,” said Solar.

“Pfft, you mean those things that have been popping up? One of them spawned in my cell and helped me get this escape route in the first place. Why should I help you guys anyways. My future has been ruined being stuck here,” said Radar.

“This is the fate of all dimensions and worlds! There is more life out there than different timelines. There are whole other universes with different versions of us. This matters a lot,” said Audrey.

“Ha, whatever you say flower girl,” he said before taking off.

That ticked Audrey off in the wrong direction.

“Ok, we’ll see about that,” she said.

“Uh oh,” said Cherry.

Audrey pulled out a wonder flower and used its power. I hoped she knew what she was doing. The ground started to shake for a bit then stopped. All we heard after was the sound of Radar in fear up ahead.

“We got him, I think,” said Audrey.

“What did you do with that flower?” asked Paper Max.

“I may have created something to get him for us,” she replied.

We ran forwards and eventually caught up to Radar. He was being held captive though in the web of something sinister. There was a huge mutant spider of some sort that got him. A wonder spider really.

“You made this?!” said Oona.

“Yeah, no big deal,” said Audrey.

“Please! Get me out of here!” said Radar.

“Only, if you help us!” said Audrey.

He thought about it for a moment.

“Ok fine you win. Just kill it!” said Radar.

That was easier said than done. This spider was powerful. To be honest I forgot about the full magic of wonder power. This spider of bedrock level armor and a powerful beam.

“Audrey, why is it so strong!?” asked Solar.

“I have no control over it! I just had in mind something scary to get payback,” said Audrey.

Louis called in the guardian to charge in.

“Get him!” said Louis.

The guardian came in from behind us and tried to take it out. It was clear that the spider was too much for the guardian to handle. It kicked it right back to us.

“No! Are you ok?” asked Louis.

They gave a thumbs up, but now I really saw the mess we were in. That’s when I noticed the seed up on the spider’s head. If we could just get it we could stop the wonder power. None of us were high enough to get it. But I got an idea. Radar’s web was on the roof, he would be able to do it for us.

“Radar! You need to get that seed on its head! I will let you out,” I said.

“What? How will that help us!?” he asked.

“Just trust me!” I said.

He looked back, then gave a gentle nod. I fired my weapon at the web and let him loose. He sure did put his skill to use and acrobat his way using the walls onto the seed. After he got it, the magical wonder aura faded away and the spider turned back into a small one, to which Radar then stepped on it.

“Woo hoo! Let’s go,” said Audrey.

“I will say, that sure was impressive, Audrey,” he said.

She chuckled.

“Well thanks. Now, we need your help,” she said.

“I can do what you guys want, but then I demand to return home. I’ve been in here long enough,” he said.

“Sounds good. Here’s the address at the factory with the part Lunar,” said Oona.

“Damn ok, it looks like a huge facility, think you can take this on Radar?” I asked.

“Please, I feel honored at least that you guys came to me for such a task. I’ll have that part in and out in no time,” he said.

“Alright, I will rift us there,” I said.

I opened another rift to take us just outside of the facility. Oona wasn’t lying, this place had security all over the place. This was just the outside too. The inside might be way worse.

“Hm, tougher than I thought. Still, I can handle this,” said Radar.

“Are you nuts?” asked Audrey.

“There’s too much out there!” said Louis.

“Yeah, I know. But I have much experience with these types of cameras during my time in the prison,” said Radar.

Radar pointed to Paper Max.

“And the plan all revolves around this guy,” he said.

Chapter VI (Lunar’s POV): Smooth as Paper

“Wait, me?” asked Paper Max.

“Yep, you are the key to getting this part. And I mean it. If we didn’t have you here I don’t think I could pull this off even,” said Radar.

“What makes you say that?” I asked.

“Most of the cameras and devices with cameras here are the same ones in the prison. I studied them for a bit in the prison library. They have super precise technology that can get clear picture perfect images of moving objects or people from the top down. Unless we were to have perfect invisibility, we would be tracked, and the guard would come get us. Then the plan is just over,” he explained.

“Huh, that’s interesting,” said Oona.

“But the cameras have a weakness, and that is they struggle to capture images of perfect 2D objects. If positioned at the right angle, a moving piece could get away undetected. That is where our paper friend here will come into play,” said Radar.

“Really? I never thought my paper would become useful in another world,” said Paper Max.

“Oh come on Max. You’re a genius scientist!” said Solar.

“Not to mention, he can get past any gaps and holes that even I can’t squirm through. It should be able to work,” he continued.

“So, what should I do?” asked Paper Max.

“This gate is right in front us. Any major disturbance is going to set off the authorities. Just walk through the gap and get over to that switch and put in this device I got here. I can disable the cameras and open this up for the rest of us,” said Radar.

He gave Max the device. Max walked right through with ease. Surprisingly he was right, no alarms were going off. Once the device was put in, Radar pulled out some tablet and began some hacking. The gates opened for us and we were able to sneak into the facility.

“Ok paper people are so cool,” said Audrey.

“Have you ever robbed a bank before you’re a natural!” said Radar.

“Back where I’m from everything is made of paper so this doesn’t really work back there,” he said.

The facility itself seemed really well built. Luckily it didn’t have active personnel everywhere, but we still had to be really careful. Audrey stumbled upon some posters on the wall nearby.

“Novafuel Industries wants you! Huh, that’s a neat name,” said Audrey.

“What did you just say?” asked Paper Max.

“Wait, that’s the company Mr. Grizz owned!” said Solar.

“So this is how it began. Even when trying to save other worlds this place is an obstacle. After we get the part can we blow this place up? I can’t let them ruin this world,” said Paper Max.

“Sorry to hear about that, but we shouldn’t do anything too major to change the timeline. It might create more voids. What if it’s a common event?” said Audrey. Max didn’t look too happy, but he agreed. I wasn’t too surprised. If this company was fast tracking fossil fuels, this device might’ve been the one to help them create that energy. Surely the Mr. Grizz we know isn’t alive on this Earth yet.

“Getting senses that the device is being held in a safe from the camera footage I see here. We’ll need another tactic to get into it. Paper Max won’t be able to slip in,” said Radar.

“Well what can we do?” I asked.

“There might not be much choice. They really put this security well together. We need to brute force our way in the safe, and then we’ll have to batter down the hatches,” said Radar.

“I got explosives ready to go but it might be too confined of a space for us,” said Cherry.

“Hey I’m more than down to take on some more people,” said Louis.

“Can we use some of that wonder power?” said Solar.

“I got a little more in me, but I have no control over what it will do to this place,” said Audrey.

“Sounds like a risk I’m willing to take!” said Oona.

“Alright then, brace yourselves!” she said.

Audrey used yet another flower and watched it go to work. The magical aura started off small, but then went towards a tablet that Oona was holding and picked it up!

“Hey what is it doing to my tablet? I control the metaverse with that thing!” she said. After some more bright glows and flashes, something came out of the tablet. Someone that looked human but still digital. Until I recognized them, it was Xara in the flesh.

“What the heck...” she started to say.

“Oh my god hi Xara!” said Solar.

“Solar? Lunar? Where the heck am I? Who are these people?” she asked.

“We may have brought you into our world. These are our other friends!” said Solar.

“It’s pretty cool to see how I designed you,” said Oona.

“Wait you’re Oona? I gotta thank you for helping restore my admin self again after Dimentio took over,” she said.

“Oh it’s nothing. Still can’t believe I can talk to you in person,” said Oona.

“I think that was all from the wonder flower. We gotta use what it gave us,” said Audrey.

“So a flower brought me in here? For what?” she asked.

“Look, we need to steal a part in this factory to help one of our other friends make a device. Long story short but that quest we were on when we last saw you got a lot larger and it’s leading to the consumption of our worlds,” I said.

“I see. I ran scans on the power that brought me here but I can’t find anything about it. It’s new to me,” said Xara.

“Oh yeah we come from another dimension! One full of wonder,” said Audrey.

“Alright guys, we gotta make this work somehow. Xara person, you got anything that can bust a safe open?” asked Radar.

Xara started to scan the area all over. It was crazy how her admin powers could work in the real world still but I guess that’s the wonder power for you.

“The safe has internal alarms that will go off if the device inside moves outside of this perimeter. The second it does it’ll activate an explosive trap underneath which will destroy the device and anyone within a 10 meter radius. Whatever you guys do it needs to be fast,” she said, “But just outside of the wall here is not much. It’s at the edge of a steep hill but if you guys can find a way out that way, it will be the fastest escape,” she said.

Everyone started to think of an idea but we were kinda limited on options and time. Suddenly, Paper Max suggested something.

“Well, something cool about us paper people is that we can modify our bodies into different shapes. You guys have paper airplanes here right?” he asked.

“Yes! I used to make tons of them back when I was younger,” said Oona.

“If one of you guys can fold me up into a paper airplane, it should work and we can just glide right out of here with the device,” he said.

“Are you sure you’ll be able to carry all that weight?” I asked.

“Well, maybe I need some support for that,” he replied.

“I can still hover in this world, it seems. I can help support the plane from underneath,” said Xara.

“No way! That’s so cool,” said Cherry.

“Alright whatever works. Now we need this safe open and then we got it all figured out,” said Radar.

“My guardian can get this thing open I think, but it will be loud,” said Louis.

“That’s fine, let’s get this plane ready to fly shall we?” I said.

We all began to work together to get Max into the plane shape we needed. He was able to extend his paper body and provide us more to work with. Within a few minutes we had our plane ready to go.

“How do I look?” he asked.

“You look great,” said Audrey.

“Oh gee thanks. Don’t take too long, it gets kinda boring like this,” said Paper Max. Louis got into position and whistled for his guardian once again. They came rushing in and made a direct impact into the safe door. As expected, the crash made the device move out a bit and started the trap. I grabbed it and called for everyone to get out.

“Ok let’s move!” I yelled.

Solar broke a hole in the wall and we got on Paper Max. I didn’t think anything else at this point could shock me, but it really was cool to see him gliding us through the air. Of course Xara was the real MVP helping carry us out of here.

“You doing good Xara?” I asked.

“Never been better,” she said.

We eventually found a block of land not too far away and landed. Everyone helped to unfold Paper Max back into his regular self.

“Ah, thank you,” he said.

“No problem at all! Thanks for getting us out of there,” said Solar.

“It’s been a pleasure, huh, there’s a seed right over there,” he said.

“Oh! That must be the seed for the wonder flower we just used. It will bring our friend here back into her online world,” said Audrey.

“Huh, I was having a little bit of fun here actually. But it’s all good I should get back. Oona it was nice seeing you,” said Xara.

“Of course! I hope that I will get to see you in the metaverse soon,” she said. With that, Audrey collected the seed and returned Xara back into her world.

“Can I get a rift back to Mojang as well? We landed kinda far haha,” said Oona.

“Oh yeah for sure,” I said.

I sent Oona back to her job. Hopefully no one noticed she was gone for long.

“The device looks pretty damn cool. You think this will work?” asked Cherry.

“This is precisely what we need to create the heating monitor. Let’s head back,” he said.

“Woah what about me?” asked Radar.

“Oh right! Here’s a rift that leads back to the timeline you’re from. Just don’t stick around the lab or Thunder will send a painful message,” I said.

“Whatever, I wanna live my own life anyways. Thanks for getting me out I guess,” said Radar.

“Nice to see you turn a new leaf. Thanks for the help!” said Solar.

Radar went back to Echo Earth while I opened up a rift and returned us back to Cherry’s garage. Things were really starting to heat up now.

Chapter VII (Lunar’s POV): A Dark World

“There you guys are! I was wondering what was taking so long,” said Dr. Gates.

“We had to run into a bit of a pickle and caught up with an old foe,” I said.

“What tea did you use sir?” asked Cherry.

“Oh I found this special green tea. It tastes quite nice,” he said.

“Oh yes. That one is a favorite,” said Cherry.

“Ok guys, let’s get down to business. With the device and a few hours we can get the heating monitor down and done,” said Paper Max.

“But when we get there, how can we find the guardian?” asked Solar.

“It’s going to be dangerous I feel. This dimension has gone through some kind of chaos from the research I’ve gone through. The only living being there could be the guardian himself,” said Dr. Gates.

“Let’s bring some more people over!” I said.

“Already on it, I’ll go back and bring some over,” said Solar.

“Same, I’ll ask some friends here. The rest of you stay here with the device, we’ll be back,” I said.

I left the garage and started texting some people over to see who would want to come.

Already I got some answers. Finley and Sammi were down to come. Mack was with Sammi already, so naturally she was coming too. Solar got Orion, Clara, and Midnite over as well. We brought everyone to the garage once ready. Luckily Cherry could hold all of us.

“Alright, we got a solid team going here now,” I said.

“Good to see you again Cherry,” said Finley.

“Heck yes,” she replied.

“This garage is sick,” said Clara.

“It is rather nice. Maybe we should get one for the science center,” said Orion.

Paper Max came to the front to talk.

“Alright guys, thank you for coming. As you all know we are here to stop the voids from taking over. Yes, I am made of paper, but that’s because I’m from another dimension. With that out of the way, I have created a heating device that can track the guardian’s dimension. It has been calibrated with the dimension gun Lunar has, and can open portals to it now. You guys will go there, and talk to them to see how we can fix this mess,” said Paper Max.

“Sounds gucci. Let’s do this,” said Orion.

“Maybe we can find a ghost dimension after!” said Midnite.

“Sure Midnite. If we get lucky,” said Clara.

“I trust that you guys are capable of taking on danger in there. If Lunar trusts you all, then I will too,” said Dr. Gates.

“Don’t worry man, we got this,” said Mack.

I turned on the dimension gun and opened a portal to this new dimension. Something was off about it. This portal looked scarier than the others, with more aggressive power and color coming from it.

“What do you think Audrey?” I asked.

“Portal is stable. But the other side might be dangerous. Guard up,” she said.

Without more delay, those of us who were jumping in went through. The ride there was certainly more harsh than the other dimensions. Eventually we came out of the portal. Something was off for sure. We landed in what seemed to be a town. But everything was destroyed, and there was nothing in sight. It was like the voids consumed this place already.

“Are we, are we too late?” asked Louis.

“No, this can’t be. But I think voids did get here first,” said Audrey.

“This is what will happen to the rest of our dimensions if we don’t hurry,” said Louis.

“Alright, no dilly dallying. Let’s find this guardian,” said Orion.

We found whatever reassembled a path and walked forward. The others were slightly scared, but I can’t blame them. Nobody wants to see their world destroyed. The sky was pretty dark as well, but still luminous enough to see around. Kinda creepy. Any nature was dead around. Just the corpses of plants were left. Any buildings here were crumbled and empty. No humans were here for sure. Even animal life was all gone.

“This place is a mess,” said Sammi.

“Looks better than my place,” said Finley.

Eventually, we came up to a building with some form of light. Everyone slowed down and got ready to defend each other. I yelled out to the building to see if anyone was there.

“Hello! Is anyone there?” I asked.

Nothing happened for a bit, but something walked out of the building with the light as well. It was a tall super buff dude. Had armor and everything, and a sick lookin helmet mask thing. They looked shocked at first after looking at us. They then did something I've never seen before. They pressed some button on a remote they had and opened a staircase out of nowhere that went upwards. It revealed some other building higher up that I didn't even see.

"Woah...", said Cherry quietly.

"Uh, are you the guardian sir!" said Solar.

They didn't answer at first, but then threw a huge boulder right at us. Finley went forwards and blocked it for us.

"Oh my god, thanks Finley," said Solar.

"We don't mean any harm! Yet," said Midnite.

They still didn't reply, and then just walked up the staircase. Seeing how they left it open, I assume they wanted us to follow him.

"I know this is crazy, but let's follow him," I said.

"Are you sure? They don't seem friendly," said Clara.

"Yes but, this has to be the guardian. I don't detect any other life," I said.

The group was looking a bit uneasy, but we walked up the staircase still. It wasn't too long. It brought us to a fancy looking building with technology all around. It looked really futuristic. After walking forward some more we found a huge open room. There was some deep void hole in the room but some platforms to walk on. We saw the mysterious person standing on a higher platform with a bunch of computer screens.

"Hey! We mean no harm. We're here to see if you know anything about the voids!" I said.

No response. Cherry brought out some cherries to see if they wanted any.

"Hey! Would you like a cherry, quite nice I-," she started to say.

The person interrupted her and took out a moon themed chain. They used it to grab the box of cherries and brought it right up to them, after which they took a bite.

"Haven't had one of these in so long," they said.

"It's pretty exciting to meet you sir! We're here to ask about the dimensions" said Solar.

"Oh yeah. That's great," he started to say.

But then all of a sudden, they threw another boulder at us. This time Midnite guarded us from it.

"Yo what is your problem dude!" said Clara.

"What's exciting to meet. I'LL WORRY about the dimensions!" they said.

"What did we do?" I asked.

"You BLEW A HOLE in the universe!" he said.

"What's happening?" asked Louis.

"Please, we need answers. We don't know much," said Solar.

They paused for a bit, and then turned around to properly talk to us. They used some technology to transform the room and showed screen displays everywhere

"My name is Angelos Kamari, and this dimension's only human. What happened here is what is happening to every other dimension, slowly. All of the dimensions are connected, with the same people. But the dimensions revolve around one person, and it's you Lunar," said Angelos.

I was shocked. I had no clue.

"Me? What about me?" I asked.

"It's called canon events Lunar. What you've been calling common events. This is how the story is supposed to go in your dimensions. These events are what connect us, but these events can be broken," he continued to say. He then looked at Solar, "One of those canon events is event SOLD. Solar dies after being blown up by the EMP bomb along with Dimentio.

That news shocked me. I saved Solar out of my own heart. I didn't think letting her die was the move. Everyone else was pretty shocked too, but especially Solar. I walked closer to her.

"That happened to the other Lunars as well?" I asked.

"That's how the story is supposed to go. Solar's death here was a canon event, and you were supposed to leave her in the cage, and you were supposed to keep your AI powers," said Angelos.

"But that's outrageous! She's my sister," I said.

"I understand. But now Lunar, because you changed the story, your dimension and the others are having voids spawn in to consume it all. Just like the dimension we are in right now," he said.

"But that wasn't my fault I just did the right thing!" I said.

"It's what happens when you break the canon," he said.

"How do you know all this?" I asked.

"Because I've seen it be broken. I know you guys know about that beast in dimension space. That thing created all these dimensions and all the events. But any breaking of those events will anger him, and cause him to attack the dimension from space. All those attacks are what's causing the voids. The more we anger the beast, the faster each dimension disappears. It happened here. The voids came in fast, but I managed to find an escape and was launched into dimension space. I witnessed the beast first hand scratching at my dimension. Once it was done, I managed to find a way back into it. But it was too late, everyone was dead. Everything was destroyed. Everything was taken.

"I'm so sorry," said Sammi.

"I had this world where I had my family, where I was happy. At least back then I was. I used this time to build a base and study the dimensions on my own. To find out the canon events and to try to make sure canon is never broken ever again," he said.

"How do we know we can trust you?" asked Finley.

"Do you want your worlds to end as well?" asked Angelos.

Finley didn't bother replying to that. Angelos was right. Nobody knew enough, and he was our only source of answers. I was still shocked and confused about the canon event though. Solar was my family there was no way I would've let her die. But even more shocking was realizing that that means the other Lunars did.

"So what can we do to fix it?" I asked.

"You already helped me with some of that," he said.

He jumped down and started walking towards Solar with his gear. The rest of us slowly backed up and guarded her.

“What do you want with her?” asked Clara.

“What? To finish her that’s all. Then the beast will finally stop making the voids,” he said.

“Wait! There has to be some other way. We can’t do this!” I said.

He looked infuriated, but decided to give it a chance.

“Ok, so what do you suggest, fellow Lunar,” said Angelos.

Chapter XIII (Lunar’s POV): Restored AI

“This is what I think. You said that the event was that Solar died and I kept my AI powers. Maybe if we can just restore my AI powers, that can be enough to calm the beast?” I asked.

“And how would you plan on doing that?” he asked.

I thought about it for a bit, but then I remembered the Max I know talked about restoring my powers. I explained this idea to Angelos and let him think about it.

“Look kid, I don’t want to do this either. I’ve never looked into that other idea. It could work, but if it doesn’t, we are all screwed,” he said.

“I promise that we will try at least. Please,” I said.

He thought about it for a bit more.

“Alright fine, fix yourself and be back here. If nothing changes, I will do what needs to be done,” he said.

With that, everyone rushed out of there in a hurry. We talked about Angelos outside.

“Is he really going to kill me?” asked Solar.

“Of course not! We won’t let it happen,” said Cherry.

“Yeah, it’s not like we should 100% trust him,” said Orion.

“But what if he’s right?” I asked.

“Don’t worry Lunar, we’ll figure it out. Let’s just get your AI powers back, and go from there,” said Sammi.

“Why am I the one revolving around the canon? I just don’t get it. And could letting Solar die be one,” I said.

“Chill Lunar. We’ll overcome this, just like we always do,” said Solar.

“I know it’s just, gah I need a break someday,” I said.

“We do one last fight to save the world together alright?” said Audrey.

“Man you guys are the best. Thanks for sticking by my side,” I said.

I opened the dimension portal back to my dimension to tell Dr. Gates and Paper Max what just happened.

“So sorry to hear about that Lunar. I can’t say for sure if we can trust him, but if he was the only human there, we would have no choice,” said Dr. Gates.

“I’ll return to Echo Earth and ask Max if we can fix me up. Clara, Midnite, Orion, you guys can come back with us. The rest of you guys can chill back at home wherever you came from,” I said.

“Sounds good,” said Sammi.

“Thank god. I would like to return home. But it was a pleasure meeting you guys and experiencing this,” said Paper Max.

“Of course! You helped us a lot so thank you,” I said.

After everyone returned to their respective worlds, all the Echo Earth people went back. Cherry and Dr. Gates stayed to continue working on a possible solution to this canon event. We headed straight to our Max once we arrived.

“Max! We found him!” said Solar.

“Oh you did? How was it?” he asked.

“Not ideal. They seem legit but they said we broke a canon event. Well, that I broke a canon event. He said that all the events revolve around me for some reason,” I said.

“That’s really interesting. But what even did you break?” he asked.

I explained to Max about how Solar was apparently supposed to die. But that was hard to explain. The thought of letting Solar go lives rent free in my head or something. But am I wrong?

“It’s ok guys, we’ll try to figure it out. Looks like my attempt to restore your powers came at a perfect time. Orion, Midnite, Clara, you are free to watch if you want,” said Max.

“Why not, seems cool,” said Orion.

“We’ll watch for sure!” said Clara.

“Everyone, come with me then,” he said.

We headed over to the room with Max’s equipment all setup.

“Once you stand in that chamber, the energy will activate and hopefully turn on your systems again. I don’t think it will be too big of a harm,” said Max.

“Great! So can I go in right now?” I asked.

“I don’t think so. The energy in question hasn’t been collected yet. I’ve tried to create physical AI power but I don’t think it’s possible. But maybe you’ll have some way of doing so. What about in that minecraft AI world?” he asked.

“That world has some AI power we could bring out here with some rifts. But I’m not sure if it’s run out or not. We have to check it out,” said Solar.

“Sounds good. You guys can go there. I will spend this time refining this chamber and making sure nothing can go wrong,” he said.

“Sounds like a plan. Orion, Midnite, Clara, you all in?” I asked.

“Don’t forget me!” yelled a voice down the hallway.

Thunder walked into the room.

“Ey, good to see you bro,” said Orion.

“Right back at you brother. I heard something intense was going on down here,” he said.

“Right. We need to restore Lunar’s AI powers to hopefully stop the end of all dimensions,” I said.

“Not sure if that guardian dude was legit, but he sure was spooky, even for me,” said Midnite.

“Ah I see. Well I guess I should come too. That world is crazy dangerous from when I was last there,” said Thunder.

“You’re all good to come!” said Solar.

It felt a bit weird still to see them being such good friends, but I’m glad it’s this way now.

“Alright Thunder, come with us,” I said.

I opened up a rift directly to the AI world. As expected, we were inside the world in a minecraft world. I forgot that it was Midnite’s first time here, so she was freaking out a bit.

“Ah! What is this place?” she asked.

“Don’t worry much about it. It’s quite fun!” said Clara.

“Come on, follow me,” I said.

We headed over to the Nexus Village. Apparently I never knew its name this whole time, but Archer explained it to me recently. Our friends from there greeted us upon arrival.

“Howdy Lunar and co. Good to see you again,” said Rocco.

“Hi Rocco!” said Solar.

“Rocco, we need to get more of that AI power. Think you can help us out?” I asked.

“Sounds like fun. What is it for?” he asked.

“We need to restore Lunar’s AI powers to prevent the end of all dimensions!” said Solar.

“Yikes, that includes us too?” he asked.

“I’m afraid so. Their hardware would be destroyed, and it’ll take you all too,” I said.

“I see. Well it’s time to save the world one last time. I called the group over. We created a new system to do so,” he said.

He pressed a button on some device he had. Soon all of the Minecraft friends we knew were here. Alex ran on in. Kailani riptided her way here. Via docked her ship. Archer, Zero and the Chief came out of the village. Axol was here too.

“Oh my god. What a reunion,” said Lunar.

“We heard the call. Something big is happening,” said Kailani.

“Right. Guys! We have a way to restore my AI powers in the real world. But we need more AI data files here to do so,” I said.

“Aw, now we’ll be evenly matched again. How come you’re doing this now?” asked Alex.

I explained to everyone the dilemma we were in and that this was our only chance to save the dimensions without doing any sacrifices.

“Oh dear. Don’t worry we will help you the best we can,” said the Chief.

“Let’s gear you all up first. Zero has been helping create new technology,” said Archer.

“Really Zero? You would do all that?” said Alex.

“Eh, why not at this point. I might as well,” he said.

Archer brought all the humans some pretty impressive technology.

“Impressive. I’ve never seen shields of this caliber before,” said Thunder.

“It can also increase your range!” said Archer.

“Nothing for us digital people?” asked Axol.

“Haha don’t worry. I got us some stuff too,” said Via.

“I got my own equipment so I’m all good,” said Rocco.

“So, where should we go then?” asked Clara.

“Chloe has gotten us AI power before. We should try it there. She restored my powers before!” said Solar.

“Very true,” said Alex.

“I haven’t seen Chloe in a hot minute. Let’s get moving on!” said Kailani.

“Are you guys coming too?” I asked the Chief.

“Yes, for the sake of all worlds, I will come to help this time,” he said.

Zero said nothing for a bit, then replied.

“Alright, let’s freaking do this,” he said.

“Wooooooooo! Gang’s all here!” said Solar.

She was right, now I had to hope that my AI could be restored, and that restoring it actually stops the voids.

Chapter IX (Lunar’s POV): A Fallen Kingdom

We all took various transportation methods to get there. Rocco swore he could beat us there using just a nether portal. Midnite and Orion weren’t too keen on going in that hellish land, so we decided to just ride in some minecart railroads.

“This is quite neat Alex!” said Clara.

“Thank you! We worked hard on this. It connects the kingdom, Axol’s town, and the village all together!” said Alex.

“I will never understand why Rocco chooses to use the nether still,” said Archer.

“I usually just use my tridents but, I’ll chill with you guys today,” said Kailani.

“Life been good guys?” asked Alex.

“Oh yeah we’ve been having fun still. We recently went to new dimensions and met friends from there too,” I said.

“Like us or just other humans?” asked Archer.

“Just our fellow human friends. We didn’t have too much time to see the other version of you AI guys. But to be honest I’m not sure how different it would be,” said Solar.

“We don’t have ghosts in Minecraft but I would sure love to be able to phase through pesky traps,” said Via.

“Aha yeah I love this power. There are a few disadvantages but I won’t get to them tee hee,” said Midnite.

“How about you Orion? What’s been up with you?” asked Alex.

“Oh just like, I don’t know, just sharpening my defensive skills and stuff,” he said.

“He can try, but he’ll never catch up to me haha!” said Thunder.

“Brotherships are cool. I wish I had one,” said Kailani.

“You wish, and sometimes you don’t. Just kidding,” said Orion.

The banter continued as we continued down the track. We were at the kingdom soon enough. To my surprise, there was a nether portal there with Rocco waiting for us.

“Told you all I’d get here first!” he said.

“Congrats, want a medal?” asked Alex.

We walked in and made our way to the main castle. Chloe was chilling on her throne.

“Oh hey guys! Didn’t expect a visit. Especially from the humans. Thanks for saving my kingdom that one time again Lunar!” she said.

“It was a pleasure doing so. Chloe, we are here because we were wondering if you have more of that AI file power. What was it, the Bi Nar Eee file or something,” I said.

“Oh I know what you’re talking about. I do have some more but not here. I can show you all where,” she said.

“Sounds great!” said Solar.

I thought it was going to be a smooth journey. Before we could exit the castle, something dangerous happened. The ground started shaking and the walls did too. The people outside were scared as well. We got a look on the balcony and saw the same voids consuming our world consuming the kingdom in its whole, starting from the backside. It was moving towards us, so we had to move.

“Uh, let’s go guys!” said Clara.

“What is that thing!? I thought we got rid of the void already!” said Chloe.

“We did remove it that one time, but it’s getting worse and more will spawn. That’s why we need that file power,” said Lunar.

We all left the castle right before the stairs were consumed.

“But, my citizens! They need help!” said Chloe.

Orion and Thunder got the memo and went in to pick up a few people who were trying to get out. Midnite even ran right through a house to get someone who was stuck. Everyone met up outside the front gates. A huge cloud of smoke went through before clearing up. It revealed the kingdom, which was now destroyed. Some remains were there but most of it was gone. The void sat on the ground and finally appeared to remain put, but it would take a long time to remove it.

“No, this can’t be real...” said Chloe sadly.

“I’m so sorry Chloe,” said Alex.

“These are the same voids appearing in the real world too, but they do the same damage. We need to hurry,” I said.

“I would love to show you myself where the last file power is, but I need to be with my townspeople. I also need to mourn the loss of my greatest creation,” she said.

“Don’t worry. We’ll manage,” said Kailani.

“Yeah take your time Chloe. Sorry for your loss,” said Axol.

“They’ll be safe so long as I’m here,” said the Chief.

“Thanks guys. I know that this is probably important and related to the voids, so I’ll do my best. Here is a map that leads to the last known file bits left in this world. It truly is all that I have stored, so don’t let it go. It’s stored in a dungeon someone left behind, so it should be abandoned. There might be some looters so get the file before they can!” explained Chloe.

“We’ll take care of ANYONE in our path!” said Rocco.

“For real,” said Solar.

“Sounds good. I’ll stay here with my people, we need to rebuild something in the meantime,” she said.

“I can stay and help! Love building,” said Via.

“Same here. I’m not too cut out for dungeons anyways,” said Axol.

“Thank you guys. The rest of you should go all together. You’ll need the firepower,” said Chloe.

“Will do, thanks again!” I said.

I took control of the map and started to lead our group towards this dungeon. It wasn't too far, but it was pretty deep underground. After arriving at the entrance point, we started to walk down a narrow and steep cave.

"Eek! Spiders," said Clara.

"Oh yeah. Don't worry Clara there are way more spookier things down here in this world," said Midnite.

"You used to play Minecraft?" asked Orion.

"Back a few years ago. I held on to a copy from the black market before the game completely died many years ago," she said.

"I actually tried to play it too recently. Didn't realize it was impossible to get my hands on a copy," said Thunder.

"Well, you can always visit our world for one!" said Alex.

"I'd love it more if the caves weren't this scary," said Clara.

"Trust me. You'll get used to it," said Rocco.

"He's right. This world could be way scarier if we followed the actual mechanics of the game," said the Chief.

"You've been quiet Zero. Anything cool happening recently?" asked Solar.

"I don't talk much," he said.

"He's still getting used to our life. Just gonna take some time," said Archer.

"Wait, I think we're approaching something," I said.

I broke open a few blocks and revealed a huge open space in the cave. It was a full dungeon made with copper. I saw new mobs that I've never seen before.

Chapter X (Lunar's POV): The Tricky Trials

"Wow, I've only recently heard about this place," said Archer.

"What do you mean?" asked Orion.

"It's a very new update to our world. It added this dungeon, which is called the tricky trials. I think it used to be just a cave, but the update built around it," said Archer.

"The map leads into the center of this place," I said.

"Oh yeah, that will happen with updates," said Alex.

"What are we waiting for? Let's head in!" said Rocco.

"I like this guy's vibes," said Thunder.

"Alright then. Stay together everyone. We don't know if there are other raiders here or not," said the Chief.

"I'm not afraid," said Alex.

We walked through the main gates of the dungeon. Stuff looked ok so far. There was the occasional zombie or skeleton on the way. Nothing that none of us could take care of anyways. We soon encountered a new mob called the Breeze. We took it out and the Chief grabbed one of its drops.

"I've needed this for a while now to upgrade my weapon," he said.

"What weapon?" I asked.

"This," he said.

He took out a huge mace and used the new drop to propel himself in the air towards a group of mobs. He landed with a huge slam, taking out the entire hoard.

“Wow! It’s even better than I imagined!” said Archer.

“Indeed. I’m liking the new upgrades Norman put onto my mace,” said the Chief.

“That was incredible. I didn’t even know about these items,” said Kailani.

“New ones recently added. Archer and Zero have been at work to test them. But we needed more,” said the Chief.

“Yeah, it was a painful experience...” said Zero.

“I think we’re getting closer to the file,” I said.

We conquered a few more chambers and got some more loot along the way. After blasting through a few walls we saw a hidden room. It was definitely something Chloe built. The chest was locked, but Chloe also did give us a key to use. We opened up the chest and grabbed the remaining file parts.

“Awesome, we got it!” said Solar.

“Great, now let’s head back to Chloe and help her out with the kingdom,” I said.

Before we could get out of the room, we heard a bunch of footsteps heading our way. It sounded like a group of people.

“Raiders...” said Alex.

She was right, there were a bunch of people with some overpowered gear.

“So, where’s that magical file?” one of them asked.

“It’s not for sale!” said Alex.

“Alex, you know we’ll just take it,” he replied.

I didn’t know Alex knew these people.

“Oh yeah, you and what army!” said Clara.

“What army? Look around you!” they said.

We heard a bunch of explosions, which destroyed the room we were in. He was right. This guy had a whole lotta more people than I thought. There had to be at least 30 of them.

“Wait a second, you guys are the same raiders at Axol’s village!” said Kailani.

“Yep. And we want revenge on the queen for making us work for her. So hand over that file!” they said.

That happened so long ago. These guys still aren’t over it? But they were not to mess around with. They somehow had ravagers, golems, and many wolves along with their gear.

“Pfft, bring it,” said Rocco.

Thunder and Orion looked confident too.

“Alright. So be it,” the leader of the raiders said.

They all came charging towards us. Everyone in the group held their ground. To be honest, we were able to handle them quite easily. Thunder and Orion were literal tanks. They just punched and charged anyone who tried to come near them. Clara was an absolute movement unit. Especially when working with Midnite who was immune to most attacks. The Chief was trying to make sure nobody got seriously hurt, but he was dishing out some serious pain too with his mace.

“Lunar look out!” said Solar.

One of them tried to hit me from behind, but Solar ignited them.

“Thanks Solar,” I said.

“Anything for you,” she said.

We kept working together to fight off this group of raiders. Rocco was using some wild tactics that I’ve never seen before, which included trapping people in boxes and blowing them up. Kailani was too fast for any of them to handle, being able to riptide all over the place and ruin their movement. After putting in the work, we all grouped up back together. At this point, most of the raiders were down and tired. The leader and a few others still remained in front of us.

“Tough bunch huh,” he said.

They reached for what seemed to be a secret weapon. It turned out he had a piece of the file too, just a smaller one. After using it, they had a shield that was completely immune to our normal attacks. He gave it to some of his friends and they started coming for us. We were a bit nervous, but then Zero walked in front of all of us.

“Zero?” asked Archer.

Zero didn’t respond. Instead he started creating some sort of energy cloud in his hands before releasing it above us. It started to form a bright red circle around the area. As the Raiders were running towards us, they started to get lightning struck by Zero’s storm whenever they walked in our circle. It was somehow hitting through their shield.

“Zero! How are you doing that?!” asked Archer.

“A little trick I know,” he said.

The raiders tried getting out of the circle, but kept getting struck each time. The leader was forced to stay still on his spot to avoid getting hit. Zero walked closer to him and the rest of the group. They looked really scared now.

“Pass,” said Zero.

The frightened raid leader handed Zero the other piece of the Bi Nar Eee file. After Zero got it, he turned off his virus storm thing.

“Now, scram,” he said.

The raid leader and the rest of his gang members started running out of the dungeon back to the surface world.

“Zero, that was incredible!” said Archer.

“Gotta give it to you. That was something special,” said Rocco.

“That was so cool!” said Solar.

“Thanks I guess. I can hack right through that file,” he said.

“You stood up for us, that was neat,” I said.

“Yeah well, you guys kinda are pretty cool too, can’t lie,” he said.

We all went in to give him a hug, well almost all of us. Zero handed us the file piece the raiders had, and now we surely had enough file power to restore my AI self.

“Well, let’s get out now!” said Alex.

We started walking back through the dungeon and back into the cave.

“Glad you’re finally starting to enjoy yourself Zero,” said Archer.

“Oh well. It was bound to happen,” said Zero.

After traveling back to the rest of our friends, we showed Chloe the file pieces.

“Oh I see you got the other one I lost. The raiders that used to work for me stole it not too long ago,” she said.

“Yeah well, they ain’t so tough,” said Zero.

“With this power we should be good to go. I guess we just gotta take it in the rift with us,” I said.

“How are the people doing?” asked the Chief.

“We’ve been building but there are a lot of people and not many resources,” said Axol.

“We might need to find an already built shelter,” said Chloe.

“We can probably hold some people in the Nexus Village. Archer and I can ready up the bunker,” said the Chief.

“My town will gladly take in some folks as well,” said Axol.

“Thank you both, that would be much appreciated,” said Chloe.

“So the big scary void is still here huh,” said Midnite.

“This thing is impossible to get rid of. I can’t even blow it up like last time,” said Rocco.

“We can help take them to the village. I think we got some time to spare,” I said.

“Alright, let’s do it!” said Solar.

Everyone made a bunch of minecarts and placed them on the tracks. We slowly sent people one at a time towards the village to avoid traffic. Soon it was just for the Chief, Archer, Zero, and Rocco to make their way back.

“We’ll see you guys later!” said Archer.

“If you need anything else let us know,” said the Chief.

“Will do. Thanks for helping again!” I said.

Axol and Via also made their way home.

“So, everything will be all good?” asked Alex.

“I promise we’ll figure this out. I’m not leaving this life until we get a fair 1v1 fight!” I said.

“Haha sounds good!” said Alex.

“You didn’t want to go with your people?” asked Clara.

“They’ll be fine. I need to protect this land, make sure the void doesn’t spread more,” said Chloe.

“You’re a good ruler,” said Orion.

“Thanks. You guys can go now, I will manage. Good luck with stopping the voids,” she said.

We thanked her and rifted back to the real world. I didn’t realize the situation was dire even in online worlds. Now we need to hurry more than ever before.

Chapter XI (Lunar’s POV): Mojang’s Fate

Max was ready for us once we got back.

“Welcome back everyone. Lunar, how did it go?” he asked.

“I got the files right here on this USB stick,” I said.

“Perfect, I will load that into the machine. You guys can wait in the meantime,” said Max.

“Max! The voids are also in the digital world. We’ve seen them!” said Solar.

“Oh, that is bad news,” he said.

“We’ll just need to hope that we are not too late,” said Max.

The machine was finally ready to go. I stepped in and watched Max pull the lever. The chamber got to work and started radiating with digital power. I felt it as it went through my entire body. Slowly but surely there were features of mine that came back. One of those was my computer and extra stamina. A few more minutes went by before the chamber stopped. I walked out looking about the same.

“Oh my god. Lunar, do you think it worked?” asked Max.

I showed them a part of my wrist that glowed again. The chamber did indeed work. Maybe not fully, but it definitely restored most.

“Woo hoo!” said Clara.

“Looking clean again Lunar,” said Orion.

“Hey hey! That’s the Lunar I know,” said Solar.

“It does feel great. I do feel a bit tired though,” I said.

“I would advise you not to go through rifts or portals for a while now to let the systems rest. I don’t want them to break or anything,” said Max.

“That should be ok, but we should check in with Angelos right after,” I said.

Before we could do anything else, we saw and heard a large explosion come in from across the town. It was at the Mojang location here.

“What on earth was that?” asked Midnite.

“I’m not sure. We should go look. It could be a void,” said Max.

We ran out to the Lunar Storm and drove off towards the building. I’m a little surprised that my car could fit everyone despite our sizes. I was able to reconnect with my car again digitally which was pretty cool, even if some parts were still bugged. We arrived at the scene soon after, and it was terrible. Half of the Mojang building was already consumed, and the void was only getting closer to reaching the other buildings.

“We might need some help with this one,” said Thunder.

“The Mojang building basement will probably be our best bet at removing the void,” said Max.

“We’ve never navigated this thing before. We’ll get stuck!” said Solar.

I got an idea on how to solve that problem.

“Wait a second, let’s call in some people who we know can help,” I said.

I got on my communication device and sent a rift to Alpha Earth. Soon enough, it brought the entire Mojang crew there. Ruby, Julian, Airic, and Mason.

“Sup guys!” said Julian.

“This place is pretty damn cool Lunar,” said Airic.

“Woah! What happened to the Mojang here!?” said Ruby.

“This is the future. I’m not sure how it shut down,” said Max.

“This huge void is gonna consume it all if we don’t stop it soon! Can you help us enter the building?” asked Solar.

“Sure thing. If it’s the same place I should know how to get through,” said Ruby.

“It looks like the same one. Let’s do it,” said Julian.

“Mason, what are the readings saying?” asked Ruby.

“Void energy is pretty dangerous. Luckily the tunnels are still open for us to use,” he said.

“Alright then. Lunar and Solar, join these Mojang experts. Thunder, you go to. The rest of us should stay here,” said Max.

“Sounds good to me,” said Thunder.

“Whatever you say boss,” said Orion.

“Good luck!” said Clara.

The 7 of us went down a hill and entered a hidden door. The tunnels were pretty cool, but also a bit small.

“This was not built for me I’ll say that!” said Thunder.

“Oh yeah, this is unfinished. I’m surprised it still is unfinished,” said Ruby.

We kept going through the tunnels until we finally reached what seemed to be the building. Despite the fact that it was abandoned.

“I never thought it would end like this,” said Julian.

“It is tragic,” said Airic.

We made our way to the upper floors until we could see the void. It was massive and seemed to carry more power than the one at the Spark Researchers’ place.

“Wow, that thing is massive,” said Solar.

“Pfft, we can handle it,” said Ruby.

Ruby put laptop down at a table and started doing some calculations. I put down my Super Merge and started getting it to close. Things were going smoothly until the void started growing faster towards us.

“Ah!” yelled Solar.

Mason stepped in and put in a force field thing around us.

“Technological Terror will stall for now,” he said.

“Wow thanks! It feels safe here now,” I said.

“Neat technology,” said Solar.

“Alright I got us something!” said Ruby.

She came up to us and revealed some form of physical AI block. It was like real life AI files.

“Woah! What is that?” I asked.

“Some pure data chunks I got in real life. It’s coded with creative powers,” said Ruby. She placed the block down and let it get to work. It grew and created a hole that started sucking the void in. Once in, the void disappeared completely. This seemed to provoke the void, but we were able to keep it at bay. Slowly but surely, the rest of the void disappeared. It left behind a ruined Mojang building, but at least it was gone.

“Woo!” said Solar.

“Thanks for your help,” I said.

“Of course no problem,” said Ruby.

“Can we explore this place more? It feels surreal to be in another version of our workplace,” said Airic.

“Yeah I don’t see why not. I got more time to kill,” said Lunar.

“How did this big scary void get here anyways?” asked Julian.

“I’m not sure. I was just done restoring my AI powers. Then a few minutes later, this void just appeared,” I said.

“Really strange,” said Mason.

We walked towards what seemed like the main front desk. Ruby went through some documents and found a newspaper.

“Oh my, this is what happened?” she asked.

“What?” asked Airic.

“Mojang was shut down after our AI robots went rogue worldwide. Nobody was really hurt but the government didn’t trust us to keep the company alive. Something called the Metaverse was also shut down too,” she said.

“Metaverse huh, never heard of,” said Mason.

“We’ve been in it. Not in this timeline but like 150 years ago,” I said.

“The government is corrupt and doesn’t trust anything,” said Julian.

“Maybe, but the damage our robots did looked deadly in these old photos,” said Ruby.

“Maybe we should make them better?” said Airic.

We didn’t get a chance to question more. The rest of the Mojang building started to collapse and fall. Everything made a run for it out the front entrance. The police were already here to investigate, but we met up with Max and the others.

“Good join closing the void,” said Max.

“We found answers on our building Max,” said Ruby.

“Oh really. Glad you got that closure,” he said.

“It’s not pretty, but now it makes me rethink our use of the robots in the world we came from,” she said.

“I would say right now Lunar, you’re good to use a portal again,” said Max.

“Sounds good! We should go right now then right,” said Solar.

“We can, but maybe we should bring in more people. Angelos is scary, and I don’t want you getting hurt,” I said.

“He is quite frightening, but also quite buff,” said Midnite.

“I’ll go. I’ll show this Angelos what happens when he messes with Thunder,” said Thunder.

“He won’t be able to handle both of us!” said Orion.

“Oo, Bedrock can probably come too,” said Clara.

“That guy? Ha, we’ll be unstoppable,” said Thunder.

“We honestly might need some more people who are willing to come...” I said.

“Yeah... that guy could have whatever powers in any dimension,” said Solar.

“We’d love to come, but the Mojang at home won’t run itself!” said Ruby.

“Sounds good. Thanks for helping us again!” said Solar.

The 4 Mojang people left soon after. We were still thinking about who else could help us. I think all of my friends in Alpha Earth were busy, but I did know someone who may be willing to use my microbots again for good this time.

Chapter XII (Lunar’s POV): Brute Force

Bedrock joined the party once again. It was good to see him fully geared out ready for action. We were still waiting on one more person. Orion, Thunder, and Bedrock kept doing arm wrestles to see who was the strongest. Soon I got a text back, and I got the rift ready. Tom Phan walked in.

“Tom!?” said Solar.

“That’s me all right,” he said.

“Your prison sentence is over already?” asked Midnite.

“They reduced my sentences a bit. I’m already working on making it up to Dr. Gates,” said Tom.

“Tom! Good to see you doing well,” I said.

“It’s great to see you too Lunar. I hope that I can make up for what happened before,” he said.

“This is the spooky ghost guy you told me about?” asked Clara.

“Well I could be a ghost but my mask is gone,” said Tom.

“I’m giving Tom some more controlled microbots to use since he’s experienced with them,” I said.

“Ah, the famous science idol Tom Phan. You’re written in a lot of science history magazines,” said Max.

“Really? That is good to hear. I’ve always wanted a legacy,” he said.

“Alright people. Now that we got the cavalry here, it’s time to go see Angelos again. Hopefully we fixed things, but if not, he’s probably going to be very angry,” I said.

“We can take him,” said Thunder.

“Be safe guys!” said Max.

I opened the dimension portal that leads to Angelos. Everyone hopped in. We landed in about the same spot as last time. Things were still dark here to nobody’s surprise.

“This place is a mess,” said Tom.

“No kidding,” said Thunder.

“Alright, it’s not too far, luckily,” I said.

We walked around a bit until we saw the same base that Angelos led us into in the first place.

“This place is, something alright,” said Thunder.

Even Bedrock looked a little nervous walking in.

“We got this guys. First we just need to see if restoring my AI worked. If not, then we can get ready to hold him off,” I said.

The hallway soon ended and we saw Angelos in the flesh again.

“Angelos! It’s me Lunar! I restored my powers!” I said.

He didn’t reply.

“Yo, we’re here you know!” yelled Solar.

No response at first, but then he jumped down to us violently.

“Restored the powers. I saw,” he said.

“Yeah... so did anything happen?” I asked.

“Did anything happen? Did anything HAPPEN?! You created voids EVERYWHERE!” he yelled.

I did not expect that at all. I thought it was good enough.

“We, we didn’t fix anything?” I asked.

“NO. Instead, you provoked the beast even more by changing the story. Lunar’s AI and Solar, alive at this stage, was never meant to be a possibility. And now the beast is more angry than ever. More than I’ve ever seen it before,” said Angelos.

“How do you know what the beast is doing?” asked Solar.

Angelos pulled out another widescreen. It appeared to be a huge camera glaring right into the dimension space. He was right, everyone was watching as the beast was scratching at other dimensions live.

“That thing is terrifying,” said Midnite.

“Talk about raw power,” said Thunder.

“Thanks to your futile attempt, the end of all dimensions is going to happen sooner. I warned you what would happen if you couldn’t fix it,” he said.

“Wait, Angelos please!” I said.

“No! I need to fix this now!” he said.

He got out his chains and tried grabbing Solar in. Tom used the microbots to create a barrier for us.

“I got us,” he said.

“Thanks,” said Clara.

Angelos then proceeded to run right into the microbot wall and completely broke it. Orion and Thunder were up to deal with him. Angelos was no joke. He completely shoved Orion out of the way, and matched Thunder’s strength head on. Bedrock was also there to help, but even he couldn’t make a dent in Angelo’s armor. The 3 tanks were all pushed away like paper.

“Ok, this guy might be a problem,” said Thunder.

“No kidding!” said Orion.

“Follow me!” I said.

We all ran out the hallway, but Angelo’s followed us this time. We kept firing attacks as we were running, but he just kept charging at us. Bedrock stopped mid way and did a slam in place that seemed to stun and knock him back for a bit.

“Nice Bedrock!” said Midnite.

We took advantage of this window of time to finally get out of Angelo’s base. I brought out the portal gun and opened it back home.

“Come on, let’s go!” I said.

We all hopped through. I was the last one in. As I slowly went through, I saw that Angelo’s caught up and was trying to rip open the dimension portal as it was closing. Solar also noticed, and fired a blast right at his face to push him off and let the portal close. Max was waiting for us.

“Is everything alright?” he asked.

“No! Whatever we did didn’t work, and now Angelo’s is trying to kill Solar himself!” I said.

“Oh dear. Well at least you’re all ok now,” said Max.

“Yeah but, now the void issue isn’t fixed. And if Angelo’s is right, we’re gonna start seeing a lot more of them,” said Solar.

“I’m afraid you’re right,” said Max.

He showed us articles on his phone about cities everywhere seeing voids. This was definitely not good.

“We’re not safe here. The people will be ok, but Angelos can probably find us given his technology,” I said.

“Tom, how about you take my kids back to your world? It’ll be better for them for now. The rest of you, we should probably take care of the voids as they spawn,” said Max.

“I’m all in!” said Clara.

“Yeah sure,” said Orion.

“Alright. We’ll be fine back home,” said Tom.

“I hope so,” said Solar.

I opened a rift back and we jumped through. Our first priority was to finally make it back to my house. It’s been a while since I last lived here.

“Finally, home sweet home,” I said.

“This is a pretty cool place, Lunar!” said Solar.

“Sometimes it’s nice to be back. This is where it all started. My first adventure with Alex, Aidan, and some others,” I said.

“Tom, you wouldn’t happen to know anything about dimensions would you?” asked Solar.

“Well, I have read a bit about it. All that talk about a beast and stuff, well that Angelos dude is right. There are some rules it created to happen in every dimension. Those canon events as they call them,” he said.

“Yeah that’s exactly what he told us,” I said.

“I’m afraid that he’s most likely right. If you broke a canon event, then that is why this is all happening,” said Tom.

“But how could a canon event be so cruel!? How come Solar is supposed to die in this story,” I asked.

“I can’t tell you that. That creature made these events,” said Tom, “I understand your concern. For now, let’s just relax,”

We sat around for a while to just wind down. I even got to cook some food and play some music. Times like these remind me of how good the simple life was. Unfortunately, it did not last for long. Out of nowhere, a rift opened up right in my house, and Angelos walked out.

“Angelos!?!?” I said.

“I told you I wasn’t done, now get over here!” he yelled.

He tried dashing at us, but we managed to dodge. Tom called in the microbots and made a wave for us to quickly get out of the house. Angelos was still running after us.

“Quick, we need some help here!” said Solar.

“Calling everyone and anyone that I know here!” I said.

I texted a bunch of people to have them ready to meet at a local park. Tom took us there. Luckily everyone was already there. I was so glad to have such a nice group of friends willing to fight on a Sunday afternoon.

Chapter XIII (Lunar’s POV): Realm Fight

“Angelos is here? We’ll take care of him this time!” said Mack.

“Yeah, you’re safe here Solar,” said Sammi.

Even Finley showed up. He even brought the Ayson brothers too!

“Wow Grayson and Jayson. Been a while huh?” I said.

“Yeah well, we’ll help you out,” said Grayson.

“If Finley deems it important it’s probably important,” said Jayson.

“Thanks Finley,” I said.

“Anything. I needed target practice anyways,” he said.

“Aidan, you brought the actual cover?” I asked.

“Yeah! It’ll be like, never mind,” he said, “I brought in someone you might know too,”

“Jesse! Good to see you again,” I said.

“Feels good to be here. I never forgot about that blaze power. Now it’s what we’ll use to burn this Angelos guy alive,” he said.

“Let’s not get too ahead of ourselves. This guy is not something to mess with,” I said. I noticed that even Katrina showed up.

“Glad you could make it again for another fight,” I said.

“Let’s just make it quick. I’m not sure if my weapons are built well,” she said. We didn’t have much time to catch up with our friends. Angelos was here.

“So, you got more people. Should’ve known,” he said.

“Angelos, this is crazy! There has to be something else we can do!” I said.

“Not anything that I’ve not SEEN before!” he yelled.

Not much talking after that, he went for Solar once again. Finley went to stop him, but strength was no talk between the 2. Finley had no chance. Sammi and Mack threw some attacks too, but still nothing much.

“Alright, let me try!” said Solar.

She charged up a huge fireball. The same super attack I’ve seen before. She landed a direct hit on Angelos, and for once it finally seemed to have hurt him a bit.

“You were always strong huh?” he said.

Wonder what that meant. No time to think about it. I used the super merge and created a copy of Angelos to help us fight. The clone was weak, but it matched his power for just enough time. Tom finished it by blocking him with his microbots.

“I don’t think we can keep this up,” said Tom.

“We should get out!” said Katrina.

“I’ll open a rift back to Echo Earth, we could use a small recharge,” I said.

Everyone hopped through again. For some of these guys, it would be their first time rifting.

“This world is pretty neat,” said Jesse.

“I’ve always wanted to go to the future,” said Katrina.

“Quick! This way!” I said.

We ran towards the Spark Researchers’ base. Most of them were gone fixing voids I assumed. Luckily there was still someone here.

“Ashley, thank god you’re here,” I said.

“Oh hey Lunar and friends. You guys seem to be in a predicament,” she said.

“Can you heal us up or something? We’ve had a long day of fighting,” I said.

“Sure thing,” she said.

Ashley grabbed some spark like flowers from a box and let each one of us absorb it. It felt refreshing to say the least. Everyone else agreed.

“Wow! They taste good or something!” said Mack.

“I don’t know about that. But I feel way better now. Thanks Ash!” said Katrina.

“Yeah of course. What’s going on anyways?” she asked.

“Long story short, we’re being chased by this really scary dude named Angelos. Voids are spawning too,” I said.

“That does not sound good,” said Ashley.

We heard a rift open not too far away outside the place. Angelos was here again.

“It’s like he knows where we are at all times,” said Finley.

“We need to get out now!” said Solar.

“I have a familiar friend that can do just that,” said Ashley.

We followed her into the basement of the base. It turns out there was a whole docking system and lake. There was a familiar boat docked and I knew just who owned it.

“Well well, welcome back heroes,” it was Captain Augie.

“Hi Augie!” said Solar.

“Augie! We need to get out of here,” said Ashley.

“What’s wrong dear?” he said.

We heard a loud break in noise from above.

“That’s what’s wrong,” said Sammi.

Aidan and Tom built a thick wall that could stall for a bit of time.

“Alright I see now. Everyone aboard Atlantis! I can get us to another part of town,” he said.

We all got on and let the boat do its job. The wall that was built broke, and Angelos saw us.

“Ah! He’s right there!” said Solar.

Angelos was able to run across the water like it was nothing. This man had better agility then Clara even.

“He’s not gonna give up!” said Aidan.

“We’ll see about that,” said Augie.

He went to the back and revealed a huge cannon at the back of the ship. After firing a shot, it hit Angelos and knocked him all the way back.

“Woah! What a cannon,” said Jesse.

“She’s a beauty. We’re almost out by the way!” said Augie.

The water took us right into a lake and back onto shore.

“Thanks for the help you two. We need to keep moving,” I said.

“Good luck!” said Ashley.

“It was my pleasure,” said Captain Augie.

We walked into the city and found a place to rest at.

“Do you hear that? Those voices sound familiar,” said Solar.

We walked down a hallway and opened a door. It was Liam, Dylan and Eli in some sort of court trial.

“Wow! It’s you guys,” I said.

“Oh hey. We’re in the middle of a trial. I’m trying to defend your lab here over the experiments it has been running,” said Liam.

“Little Buddy is safe and a hero. I won’t let him be removed!” said Eli.

“Sheesh. Guys we have a big problem, a guy is after us and-,” I was interrupted. Angelos busted into the room we were in. The city people and judges were frightened.

“There you all are!” he said.

“Hold on, nobody steps in between my clients and I,” said Liam.

“A lawyer huh? What are you gonna do? Read me the constitution?” said Angelos.

“Nah, I got this bad boy,” said Liam.

Liam pulled out his rocket launcher and fired it right at Angelos. It must’ve caught him off guard, because he took a direct hit and got pushed out of the room.

“Woo!” said Eli.

“And that is why your honor, my clients are innocent,” he said.

The trial was dismissed early and everyone left.

“Well thanks for coming, we won because of you guys,” said Dylan.

“So who is that guy?” asked Eli.

I quickly ran the situation through all 3 of them. They looked concerned, but were ready to help.

“For you guys, we can stall this Angelos as long as you need,” said Liam.

“Yeah for sure. I got some new guys to help,” said Dylan.

“Perfect, much appreciated,” I said.

“This place is a mess now,” said Finley.

“Yeah, it wasn’t much better when Little Buddy tried entering,” said Eli.

“We’re running out of places to go Lunar,” said Solar.

“I know, but I have one last place we can try,” I said.

I opened a rift to the Minecraft world. Angelos might have a harder time dealing with us there.

“We can hold him off for as long as possible,” said Liam.

“Yeah! Little Buddy will make light work of him,” said Eli.

“Thank you. The rest of you guys let’s go!” I said.

We headed straight for the Nexus Village. The Chief sensed our presence and welcomed us.

“Great to see some old faces. Lunar, what brings you back again?” he asked.

“Restoring my AI powers didn’t work, and now Angelos is trying to kill Solar,” I said.

“I see. Come into the village. I think you guys need a slight advantage if you are to win,” he said.

The Chief took us to Norman’s workplace. He was creating some new technology.

“Oh hey guys. I’ve been working on some tech. It could probably help,” said Norman.

“Hey looking good bud,” said Jesse.

“Oh, thanks,” he said.

“So what’s this technology?” asked Mack.

“This power serum I have can temporarily power you up by a lot. It’ll let you take on anything. I also have toxic screens that can blind him,” said Norman.

“Perfect, we’ll take anything! Thank you,” said Solar.

We were right on time. A rift opened inside the village. Angelos was here. We needed to end the chase right here and now.

“Alright guys, one last time,” I said.

“I’ll join too. The village guard is here to back you up,” said the Chief.

We all walked outside to confront Angelos.

“Those friends of yours were tough, but I have a job to do,” he said.

“Can’t you just leave us alone?” I asked.

“NO! Can’t you tell that our dimensions are unraveling!? I need to fix this mess because of your incompetence now,” said Angelos.

“How do you know that killing Solar would even solve all this!?” said Mack.

“It’s better than doing nothing,” he said.

He charged straight for us. I used up the power boost and fired a blast right at him. It did a ton of work. He was knocked out for a bit.

“Woo! Good going Norman,” said Katrina.

He slowly got back up, revealing that a shield absorbed most of the hit.

“Damn it!” said Grayson.

“Alright, that’s it,” said Angelos.

He walked towards us slowly. We tried pushing him back, but nothing was working now. His armor was too strong at its peak. Tom tried another microbot tunnel on him, but it wasn’t able to break through.

“Brace yourselves,” said Tom.

We all held our ground. Before Angelos could even reach us, a huge void spawned in from above the village. It was starting to suck it all. Angelos looked up and was more concerned about that.

“Oh dear. It’s here,” he said.

“Everyone. Evacuate the premises!” said the Chief.

Everyone dropped what they were doing and headed for the exit. The debris was getting in our way, but the Ayson Brothers were good enough to clear a path. I was going to be the last one out, but suddenly, the void got a good hold of me and was bringing me up.

“Lunar!” said Solar.

I thought I had no way out. The void pull was too strong. Suddenly out of nowhere, A hand grabbed onto me, it was Angelos.

“Hold on dude!” he said.

“I’m trying!” I replied.

Angelos looked back and saw that the void was pulling him in too.

“We only have one way to get out of this!” said Angelos.

He pulled out a similar version of the rift gun and made a rift above in the sky right before the void. This rift portal looked different then any one I’ve ever seen. We were eventually brought into it and crash landed. I will never forget the look of terror on my friends faces as I went through.

Chapter XIV (Lunar’s POV): The Astral Afterworld

The landing wasn't smooth. We ended up on this huge piece of rock. This place was like a brand new dimension or something. It looked like dimension space in the sky, but I knew we weren't in dimension space. There was debris and broken down buildings. Most importantly, the gravity here was pretty light, and the rock chunks were floating. Angelos started to get up again.

"Great, this place," he said.

"What is this place?" I asked.

"The only place I could've spawned to get us out of that mess. This is the Astral Afterworld. A place where you go after you die. If you play a significant role in the creature's world," he said.

"Like connected to the canon events?" I asked.

"Yeah, any that are connected to you at least," he said.

"Look, I just wanted to protect Solar ok. I just," I started to say.

"Look, I also get it. Believe me I do. But some things are just meant to happen, or else doom will come," he said.

"Angelos. How do you know all this? How do you really know about this stuff? How do you know that I broke a canon event?" I asked.

He paused for a bit before replying.

"Because I broke it once myself," he said sadly.

He began to take off some parts of his armor, most notably his helmet and mask. That's when I got a good look at his face, or mirror I should say. He looked like an older version of me. One that was war ravaged.

"Evil Lunar?" I asked.

"No, not Evil Lunar. Just Lunar," he said.

"You're, me?" I asked.

"Yeah, I'm you. I was that dimension's Lunar," he said.

This was a huge shock to me. I mean, I appreciate his build now. It gives me hope for what I could be in the future.

"What, what happened?" I asked.

"I saved Solar from the EMP bomb too. Lost my AI powers. Things were peachy. I didn't see Dr. Gates or anything. I was the first Lunar to break the canon supposedly. A few years went by, life was still great in Echo Earth. One day, a bunch of voids opened up and started consuming everything. I wasn't ready for it. I watched as all my friends and family got sucked in. Gone. I was about to be next, but I found an opening that led me right to the dimension space. There I saw the creature. Scratching at my dimension aggressively. I had to watch it all occur. Then when it finally left, I waited for the piece of metal I was on to drift back to the opening and made it back to the dimension. That's why my base is in a dark world. That dimension was destroyed completely, all 3 earths," explained Angelos. I walked over to give him a small pat on the back. That sounded tragic. I could never imagine going through that.

"I'm so sorry," I said.

"From then on I rebuilt what I could and tried to get as much information on this creature. I looked across multiple dimensions with my own portal gun and studied what angered the beast. I could tell that there were canon events and they were revolving around us. I tried my best to make sure each event was being followed, so no more damage would happen. And it worked for a while now, until you,” he said.

“I honestly had no idea,” I said.

“Of course you didn’t, no Lunar knows but me and you now I guess. That’s why I wanted to remove Solar. But looking back, I remember how I was like you, caring about my friends so closely until they were removed,” he said.

“It’s ok. I feel your pain in a way. I just want the best for my friends too,” I said.

“I know you do. I do too. There was just no easy way out of it,” he said.

“So what’s happening out there now?” I asked.

“The voids are surely going to speed up. Maybe your friends are safe for a bit now, but soon dimensions all over are going to see these voids, until there are none left,” said Angelos.

“Is there really no other way that we can stop the creature?” I asked.

Angelos didn’t reply at first.

“If you really want Solar to live still, we can try slaying the creature. But this thing has the immense power of a god,” said Angelos.

“Well, I would love to try at least. If we get enough people and do enough magic, maybe it’ll work!” I said.

“You know, you remind me of when I used to be that energetic Lunar. We can try that one last idea. If we go down, so be it. I don’t want to live by these canon event rules anymore either,” he said.

“Let’s go!” I said.

“But now. We need extreme firepower. You guys could barely take me on. And we are stuck in this world right now. The creature designed this so it’s impossible to leave,” said Angelos.

He was right, my rift gun isn’t working. And I couldn’t see how we could get out. We sat together in silence trying to figure out how to leave.

“Perhaps, we could help,” a familiar voice said behind us.

I looked behind and was truly shocked this time. It was Redgar, and Hopper!

“Redgar, Hopper!!? You guys!!” I yelled.

“Yes, I’m still alive. I made it here after meddling with the creature,” said Redgar.

“And I am Hopper, the legendary warrior that I hope Rocco told you about. If you met my brother Rocco,” said Hopper.

“Of course I’ve met him! He really misses you,” I said.

“I do as well,” said Hopper.

“You look kinda cool in human form,” I said.

“I got used to the look over time,” he said.

“I never met a Redgar before, but Hopper, I remember my Hopper,” said Angelos.

“This place is a sort of resting place for all those people you took up Lunar. But together, we realized that we might as well try to help you, after overhearing your conversations,” said Hopper.

“I can’t let my death go out in vain. You guys aren’t joining this world,” said Redgar.

“I appreciate that so much guys. It’s great to see you guys again,” I said.

“I’m not sure how we can get out. But perhaps we can help you find the other people here. Maybe someone you fought has the power to bring us out,” said Hopper.

“I think there might be. But we need to look for them,” I said.

“We can hop across these boulders. The villains we’ve fought will be here,” said Angelos.

“No time to waste then, let’s find these bad guys!” I said.

Chapter XV (Solar’s POV): AIs Assemble

The void finally stopped growing for now. We put everything into it. Everyone was still in shock of what just happened.

“No! It can’t be!” I yelled.

“It’s ok Solar. I’m willing to bet that he’s still ok!” said Sammi.

“Yeah, yeah Lunar always gets through these things. But he’s stuck with that madman!” I said.

“Angelos did basically save him. Maybe he had a change of heart,” said Tom.

“Maybe. But now what do we do? Angelos was right, the voids are only getting stronger, and it’s because of me,” I said.

“Chill Solar. We’ll stop this mess. Trust us,” said Finley.

“The voids can be stopped still if we get enough people together,” said Tom.

“Yeah! We know lots of people. We can stop this mess together,” said Mack.

“I kinda just want to chill for a bit. The last few months and years have been filled with stuff to do and save,” I said.

“Fair enough, you deserve a little break at least,” said Katrina.

The rest of all our AI friends came over to help close out the commotion.

“Solar are you all right?!” asked Kailani.

“I’m all good Kailani. But we lost Lunar,” I said.

“Oh dear, that’s not good,” said Axol.

“I think he’ll be fine, but we should probably worry about these voids first,” I said.

“Hey Axol, nice to see you,” said Finley.

“Good to see you too, friend,” he replied.

“Well what can we do about this?” asked Alex.

“The void here is too dangerous. We should probably evacuate this world entirely,” I said.

“But what about us?” asked Rocco.

I thought long and hard about it. We couldn’t just leave them here. I got an idea. It might be crazy but it also might just work.

“Crazy idea here. But what if you guys come with us,” I said.

“Up there? To the real world?” asked Archer.

“Yes exactly, we can take a rift. It works for us, so it might work for you guys,” I said.

“But we’re just made of data bits or something, I mean look at Zero. He’s literally just a program,” said Alex.

“I know. But it’s something we might as well try. Not only for your safety, but if we group up all together with our friends in the real world, we have a good chance at cleaning all the voids,” I said.

They all looked at each other for a bit before agreeing with the plan.

“Alright Solar. I trust you. Lead the way!” said the Chief.

“Let’s do this!” I said.

I opened up a large rift back to the lab. I even double checked it to make sure that it was stable and that nothing could go wrong. All the humans went in first, but the AIs were still a bit hesitant.

“Alright. I will go in first. Wish me luck!” said the Chief.

“Good luck!” said Via.

He hopped in. I didn’t hear any screams of pain, so I assumed it was good.

“Alright, you guys now!” I said.

Alex went in, followed by Rocco, Kailani, Via, Axol, Chloe, Archer, Norman, and Zero. I went in right after. I got up and saw something incredible. My AI friends are all standing with new human looks.

“Woooo! I knew it would work. You guys look awesome too!” I said.

“I feel a bit weird but it’ll work,” said Axol.

“I feel just as I did the last time I was here,” said Alex.

“Indeed. I forgot that we did leave our world back long ago,” said the Chief.

“This place gives me the chills. Is the AC on?” asked Zero.

Max and the rest of the crew from the lab came in.

“Woah! You brought them here?!” asked Orion.

“We sure did!” I said.

“Wow Solar. Wait, where’s Lunar?” asked Max.

I explained to them what happened to Lunar, and what we needed to do next.

“You’re right, Lunar is tough. He will be ok,” said Max.

“Is that Angelos guy finally off your butts?” asked Eli.

“Actually, Angelos did save Lunar in a way. He might be chill now,” said Sammi.

“The voids here are getting strong. We need to get rid of them,” said Dylan.

“I know, and for that reason we need everyone on board. Everyone that we’ve ever met and known to work together,” I said.

I got my phone out and conducted a mass recruitment session. Everyone else did the same.

We first got Liam and the entire Spark Researcher crew along with Augie. Dr. Gates and Gash came along too. Heck I got the whole Mojang staff and Oona to join as well. Finley called Cherry in too.

“Hey Solar, I might have a little surprise for you. Xara and I were talking about it after you visited,” said Oona.

“Oh yeah? What’s up?” I asked.

“Can you open a rift portal and let her change some settings?” she asked.

I did as she requested. After tinkering a bit, the portal turned on and out came Xara herself, in the flesh.

“Woah! Hi Xara!” said Alex.

“Well well, this place is neat,” said Xara.

“A living admin in the real world? This must be a fever dream,” said Max.

“That’s really freaking awesome,” said Midnite.

“Solar, don’t worry about Lunar. He’s a tough cookie. I will provide the guard now,” said Gash.

“Thanks Gash. Appreciate all the help from you guys,” I said.

“The lab is quite full now, I’ll grab some more chairs for everyone,” said Max.

“I’ll get the cookies!” said Eli.

“Ah Dr. Gates. Hope you’re doing well now,” said Tom.

“I hope you are too. Glad to move on,” said Dr. Gates.

“I got 2 more people coming in!” I said.

The dimension portal from the lab opened and out came Audrey and Louis.

“We’re here again!” said Audrey.

“Wow, Audrey?” said Tom.

“Oh my god. My dad from another dimension,” said Audrey.

“Well, this is awkward,” said Gash.

“Mine is still at home sleeping. She’s recovering a bit from the whole incident,” said Tom.

“Really? Where I came from everything is all good!” she said.

“Glad to hear so,” said Tom.

“With the wonder power on our side, we can do this now!” I said.

“Hell yeah. What’s wonder power?” asked Mack.

“Don’t worry about it too much. Let’s just say it can do anything you want,” said Louis.

“My god you have a lot of connections Solar,” said Xara.

“Thanks, but we all know each other because of Lunar. And right now he’s in a bit of a pickle,” I said.

Before I could continue, I heard a loud commotion outside. Everyone went to check it out. I couldn’t believe it, Radar was being sucked in by a newly spawned void.

“Is that Radar?” asked Thunder.

“Yeah, we may have freed him in exchange for help to get access to the dimension,” I said.

A huge boulder came our way, but Thunder blocked it out.

“I need a hand here!” he yelled.

Tom created a path towards Radar with the microbots. Thunder used it to get Radar.

“Thunder!” said Radar.

“I got you, for now,” he said.

Alex used her fishing rod to pull Thunder back down. We all went in to help pull. I created some shields to protect us from the surrounding debris. Xara and Gash got to work to seal the void with their own respective power. Eventually, Radar was out of grasp.

“Wow, thanks,” he said.

“Of course!” I said.

“Thunder I, I’m so sorry. If you’re still mad at me that’s ok,” he said.

“It’s whatever. I realized that I treated you not the best. I leave our past behind. I have started a new life since,” he said.

“Since you’re here Radar, wanna help us close these voids? We could use your speed,” said Max.

“Sure, why not. I can’t escape these things anyways. They’re everywhere!” he said.

“Alright guys, let’s get to work!” I said.

We all headed out. It was great to see us combining our powers for the greater good. Now I had to hope Lunar could get back safely.

Chapter XVI (Lunar’s POV): Crossover Hour

We walked past some interesting debris for a while now. Still no one to be seen just yet.

“So Lunar, how has life been up there?” asked Redgar.

“We were pretty close to solving this whole situation, but then I realized it was more complex than I thought,” I said.

“I hope Rocco hasn’t been too much of a pain in the ass to deal with,” said Hopper.

“Don’t worry! His explosive firepower has helped us greatly,” I said.

“Wait, I hear something,” said Angelos.

We stopped walking for a bit. Out of nowhere, a huge blast came straight for us. Angelos went in front and took the hit for us. We looked above where the blast came from and saw a cannon. I remember this cannon. It was the same one Evil Lunar used. And with that, the man himself walked up right beside his weapon.

“Lunar! Good to see you!” said Evil Lunar.

“Uh, good to see you too I guess?” I said.

“So how’d you die? Someone finally got to you?” he said.

“Actually, Angelos here saved us from a void and brought us here,” I said.

“Huh, I thought for sure someone killed you. Maybe I should get a second chance now!” he said.

“Hold it! First of all, that isn’t going to do anything. This is the last stop for dead people. Second of all, we need your assistance!” said Angelos.

“Help? Help for what?” he asked.

“The creature that locked you in this wasteland. We are going to take it out. And we need your explosive firepower,” said Angelos.

“Uh huh. And why would I go with you guys?” he asked.

“Because it’s the right thing to do! A true warrior would never back down,” said Hopper.

“I’d rather go down on my own terms!” said Evil Lunar.

He kept firing at us. Hopper and Redgar helped shield the damage.

“Hold on, I’m going to teach this punk a lesson once again,” said Angelos.

Angelos did some neat parkour on the floating rocks to reach Evil Lunar. Once he got to him, Evil Lunar was no match for Angelos’ strength. Evil Lunar was quickly pinned down. The rest of us joined him.

“Ok ok! Fine! Whatever! I will join this team of yours, but only because I’ve been so bored here,” he said.

“That’s more like it,” said Angelos.

“Remind me to never make him mad,” said Redgar.

Evil Lunar got up and I shook his hand. Not the cleanest of handshakes, but a good enough one to establish a truce with my evil counterpart.

“I respect you at least. I will say that,” said Evil Lunar.

“Glad to hear it,” I said with a smile.

We continued walking. There were more people to find and recruit. That part was made easy for us next. We found another familiar foe waiting for us down below. It was General Mayhem in her supercharged form. She was just relaxing on a bench. From another side, we saw a loud scream blast headed straight for her.

“Ugh, now what,” she said.

Mayhem blocked the blast and got up to look. She sent a mini rocket right back at the source.

“Mr. Grizz, old foe,” she said.

Mr. Grizz with his supercharged form walked up from the mountain where the blast came from.

“General Mayhem,” he said.

“Our battle ended 2 years ago!” she said.

“Well now I’m ready for a rematch,” said Mr. Grizz.

“Took you long enough haha,” she said.

That provoked Mr. Grizz, and made him jump down violently. The two went back and forth with attacks. Constant punching and shielding was taking place. Both were equally matched in strength. They would definitely be great people to have help us.

“Come on, let’s interrupt this fight,” said Angelos.

“Them? One of them is literally a bear!” said Evil Lunar.

“He’s not to be underestimated,” I said.

We slid down and ran towards where they were fighting. Angelos went for Mr Grizz alone. The rest of us went for Mayhem.

“Mayhem! Chill out!” I said.

“Lunar? Two Lunars? You ruined my city!” she said.

“No Mayhem! We tried to save you,” I said.

“Fair enough, well now it’s time for revenge!” said Mayhem.

She prepared to slam us down with some darkness, but Redgar used a piece of tech he had which completely neutralized the effects of the darkness.

“Wow, that’s clutch!” said Hopper.

“We’ll be safe from this toxic stuff now,” said Redgar.

“Ugh. Whatever,” she said.

We took the opportunity to clear her mind.

“Come on Mayhem, stop this! There’s no point fighting,” I said.

“Why are you guys here anyways. I was just minding my own business,” she said.

“The world as we know it is gonna be consumed All dimensions. Life is at stake here. I know you might not care, but the people you cared for, all those citizens of your old city, are at risk of dying,” I said.

That seemed to open her eyes a bit.

“If you help us out, you’ll get another shot of life again. Back in the mortal world,” said Redgar.

She continued to think about it for a bit.

“You’re right. You’re right. I did care about my townspeople. I was delusional into thinking I could keep them in forever. More than all, I just wanted to be a good ruler. But I guess I wasn’t,” said Mayhem.

“It’s ok, we all make mistakes. Now, can you come help us? We need your firepower to kill the one thing that’s causing all this damage out there,” I said.

She paused to think about it for a bit.

“Alright. I will help you out. For helping my citizens and taking care of them,” she said.

“Woo hoo!” I said.

“Do we really have to do it with THAT guy?” she pointed at Mr. Grizz. Angelos already convinced him, and was walking over.

“Do we really have to do it with THAT person?” he pointed at General Mayhem.

“Guys come on! Even I’m not this petty. Just accept each other and move on!” said Evil Lunar.

“Yeah, what he said,” I said.

They looked at each other menacingly, but then decided to form a truce for now.

“Alright. Lunar, you made a huge business choice. It better pay off now,” said Mr. Grizz.

“Trust me Grizz, the world is way happier without Novafuel Industries,” I said. We continued down a path in search. We were getting great firepower, but not anything we could use to escape this world yet.

“How are Clara, Midnite and Bedrock doing?” asked Mayhem.

“Doing really well actually! They started to research the sparks more,” I said. All of a sudden, a huge electric cage fell and trapped us. The design looked familiar.

“What is the meaning of this?” said Mr. Grizz.

Something huge from above flew in next to us. I knew who we were dealing with this time.

“Dimentio,” I said.

“Well well, you finally joined me down in the depths. Now I can get all your power!” he said.

“Dimentio stop this nonsense. We are literally in the endgame. We need your power on our side to save our worlds,” I said.

“Why would I care about your pathetic little worlds?” he asked.

“What about Xara, did you never care about her?” I asked.

He paused.

“Xara, was an obstacle in the end, I was going to rule the metaverse alone,” he said.

“No Dimentio! Oona made you guys together to help people together! She cared about you,” I said.

That made him think some more.

“Enough!” yelled Angelos.

Angelos punched the ground so hard it broke the cage right open. We slowly walked over.

“What do you want with me?” he asked.

“Listen Dimentio. We don’t want to hurt you. The only reason I’m here is so that I can ask for your help. To help us take down the creature who trapped you all here. And to save everyone in the process,” I said.

“I told you, I don’t care about that world,” he said.

“Well maybe you should!” said Mayhem.

“We may not like Lunar, but we did come from a world, and I don’t want to see the people who raised me go away. I worked hard to build a world of my own up there. Even though that world failed, I wouldn’t want it to disappear, and have my work be all for nothing,” said Mr. Grizz.

“Honestly, he does have a point this time,” said Mayhem.
Dimentio thought about it.

“I’ve just had this mindset for a while now. I’m not sure why. It does get tiring sometimes though. Alright fine. I can’t take care of you guys anyways. I will do this. In return, I would like to live somewhere better after,” said Dimentio,

“That can be arranged. So Lunar, that’s all the villains I recognize, but none of them can help us leave this place,” said Angelos.

“Wait, I know someone who might have the power to do so,” I said.
The person of the hour was arriving at the perfect time. We all heard a loud blast of music come from the distance. Kithara was here. We all ran towards her and stopped briefly. She had her wonder power still here.

“Lunar,” she said.

“Kithara,” I replied.

“Seems a bit early for you to be here, no?” she asked.

“I came here to escape a void. But now we need to leave. We need your help. Can you help us?” I asked.

“We need your firepower, and a way out of here please,” I said.

“I only have one wonder flower left, what makes you think I want to use it on this?” she asked.

“Kithara, Audrey and Louis are still there. They visit your grave often. They miss you. Would you like to at least come say hi to them one last time? And help us while you’re at it?” I asked.

“Audrey, was my best friend. I do miss her. Alright stop pulling on my heart strings. I will help you and this crowd of monsters,” she said.

“Hey, I’m a villain not a monster,” said Evil Lunar.

“All right Angelos. These are all the people I’ve taken down,” I said.

“Impressive bunch, now Kithara. How can we get out of here?” he asked,

“Watch and learn,” she said.

Kithara used her wonder flower to create a huge sized dimension portal right inside the Astral Afterworld.

“We can’t stay forever. This is a lot for the wonder power to handle. Let’s make this quick,” said Kithara.

“Impressive tech,” said Evil Lunar.

“Boy I can’t wait to see my old friends,” said Redgar.

“Rocco, I will be there!” said Hopper.

“Alright, then let’s go!” I said.

Everyone hopped through. Now we had all the backup we needed.

Chapter XVII (Lunar’s POV): Bittersweet Reunion

We landed somewhere near Galactical Laboratories. My friends weren’t close but they weren’t far either.

“So this is what our city looks like now,” said Mayhem.

“It looked better when I was running it in my opinion,” said Mr. Grizz.

“No time to waste guys, let’s find my friends and then get to planning!” I said.

I turned on my tracker and got a trail to where Solar and the others were. Solar must’ve brought a lot of people because there were a huge amount of bodies on my scanner.

Eventually we walked up to a void where I saw Solar and others trying to close it. I looked again and saw literally all the friends that I know with her. Solar recruited the whole army it seems. I walked first to avoid scaring everyone with all the villains I brought back.

“Hi guys!” I said.

They all turned towards me.

“Lunar!” said Solar.

She ran up to give me a hug.

“I’m so glad you’re ok,” she said.

“Me too,” I said.

“Lunar, glad you’re here,” said Max.

“I got everyone here to help close out the voids” said Solar.

“Yeah I can tell. Everyone is here! Wait, you brought the AIs here too?!?” I said.

“Alex! Xara too?!?” I said.

“Oona helped me with that one,” said Solar.

“Nice to see you Lunar,” said Xara.

“You got all the Spark Researchers, Mojang people, Alpha Earth people, and more.

Cherry good to see you. Gash it’s been a while!” I said.

“Well, I have a plan with Angelos to try to solve this problem. We will have to try to take out the creature ourselves. If you guys are down for that,” I said.

“I’m down to slay some more,” said Mack.

“Yeah, bring it. We can do anything now,” said Louis.

“I brought some more backup if you guys are ok with it,” I said.

“Of course! But who else? I think I got everyone already,” said Solar.

The rest of the villains and Angelos walked their way over. We all turned to face them. There was shock all across everyone’s faces.

“Oh, I thought you guys were dead,” said Max.

“Our deaths were greatly exaggerated,” said Evil Lunar.

“It’s ok guys. They’re here to help us. We need this firepower! I hope that’s ok with everyone. No hard feelings,” I said.

Nobody moved yet, until Rocco came to the front of the crowd.

“Hopper. Is that you!?” he asked.

“Brother!” said Hopper.

The two ran towards each other to give a hug. It was a warm moment. It also gave everyone else the courage to go speak to their former foes.

“So, Zero is here too huh,” said Hopper.

“Yes sir. I’m not the same Zero as before,” said Zero.

“It’s ok, Hopper. I also hated him for a bit, but Zero has had a change of heart ever since being rebuilt,” said Rocco.

“I trust you Rocco. I hope you’ve been living a good life without me,” said Hopper.

“Ah the hero himself. Welcome back Hopper!” said the Chief.

“Greetings Chief. Hope the village is doing well,” he said.

“You know Evil Lunar, you were actually cool if you didn’t act all evil,” said Max.

“Maybe so. I guess I have to credit you for building me so well,” said Evil Lunar.

“Oh well, I’m glad I get a second chance to talk to you properly,” said Max.

Mr. Grizz walked over.

“So, you took all my former employees, classic Max move,” he said.

“Yep! They are all great people too. You hired well,” said Max.

“Thanks,” said Mr. Grizz.

“Wow, the boss is here again haha,” said Thunder.

“Kinda crazy I can’t lie,” said Orion.

“Little Buddy had fun eating you that day by the way!” said Eli.

“I am delighted to know that. I was a fool. I don’t know what I was thinking. Sorry about the way I was,” said Mr. Grizz.

“Whatever, you got what you deserved. If we can work together to save the world, then I’m in,” said Dylan.

“Working for a bear is pretty funny,” said Evil Lunar.

“Better than working for you,” said Mason.

“Oh Mason! Yeah, that was kinda funny when I ditched you,” said Evil Lunar.

“He deserved it after betraying me for sure!” said Ruby.

“Ah the Queen herself is here too. I hope that file power was useful at least,” said Evil Lunar.

“Whatever. It did come in handy. Thanks for sending so much extra,” said Chloe.

“Actually, I believe that was Mason!” he said.

“Clara, Midnite, Bedrock, I would like to apologize,” said Mayhem.

“Aw Mayhem. It’s whatever now. I’m glad that you’re here now at least!” said Clara.

“Yeah! We still had fun times, you know!” said Midnite.

Bedrock gave her a hug too.

“Well well, my lawyer is here too,” said Mayhem.

Dimentio walked over to Xara.

“Hey, Xara,” he said.

“Oh Dimentio, you still look like that?” teased Xara.

“Shush. I can’t change this form now. It would be very hard if I tried to anyway,” said Dimentio.

“Oh whatever, you’re still as silly as I remember,” said Xara.

“Haha, maybe yeah. I’m sorry for what I did,” he said.

“It’s whatever. Thanks for apologizing,” said Xara.

“Wow, so that’s what you look like,” said Oona.

“Yeah I may look scary, but it’s because of this virus Radar put in your system!” said Dimentio.

“That was still a pure accident!” said Radar.

“Ah Redgar, welcome back. We appreciate what you did,” said Dr. Gates.

“It’s no problem. If I could save another life I would,” said Redgar.

“It means the world to me. I am forever in your debt, if you were still alive at least,” said Tom.

“Haha it’s honestly all good! It does feel nice to be back on planet Earth,” said Redgar.

“Audrey, I’m so sorry for what I did. I can’t be forgiven,” said Kithara.

“Sure you can! I’m so glad I get to see you again,” said Audrey.

“Yeah, I was the one who messed up really. Good to see you,” said Louis.

“But Lunar, how did you get them back?” asked Audrey.

“Well turns out there's an afterlife where all the people related to the canon go. We found them and brought them back for a bit!” I said.

“Where is Angelos now anyways?” asked Sammi.

That was a good question. I started to look for him through all the people. Eventually, I noticed him staring at the sky not too far from the crowd.

“Not gonna join our reunion?” I asked.

“Nonsense. We work together as a team and have fun as a team,” I said.

“It’s just a painful reminder of what happened that day. Being here in Echo Earth. I’m glad you’re alright at least,” said Angelos.

“It’s ok. Just glad we could try another solution,” I said.

“Speaking of, it looks like this reunion made our job easier. With all these people here, we surely broke something else in the canon. The creature will be outside our dimension soon,” he said.

“How can we fight it? I tried to when we saved Audrey, but Redgar ended up just distracting it for us,” I said.

“We’ll have to take a portal into the outskirts of the dimension space again. I can create a platform to use so we don’t wander off too much. When we’re out there, the creature won’t be as big, it will be our best chance to kill it,” said Angelos.

“Sounds like a plan,” I said.

I got everyone’s attention and explained to them what the plan would be. We got ready to go right after. Dr. Gates installed a brand new portal that could safely lead to dimension space with the help of Audrey's wonder power. The rest of our tech people made sure it was safe to roll out.

"Alright people. With all 52 of us we got this!" I said.

We slowly went through the portal afterwards. This was going to be scary, but fun.

Chapter XVIII (Solar's POV): Race against the Dimensions

We landed on a huge energy platform that Angelos was supplying. I won't lie, he still scared me a bit, but at least he's not trying to kill me anymore.

"It will be here soon," said Angelos.

"What will be here?" asked Finley.

"The creature. The one Redgar fought off. Over time it's gotten even stronger, and won't be pushed back so easily. So everyone be ready," he said.

"We are ready, bring it!" said Thunder.

We all stood our ground for a bit. I felt a large cool breeze headed straight for us. We all shielded ourselves and felt a huge bump on the platform that shook us. There it was, the creature. Looked exactly like before with all the mythical creature parts. All of Lunar's favorite animals mashed together. It was walking towards us. Then it did something nobody expected, it spoke.

"Angelos, or should I say, Lunar," it said.

Everyone had no clue what it meant, except Lunar, he didn't look too surprised.

"Finally, I can end what started this chaos," the creature continued to say.

"I've lived by your rules for too long, and watched you kill everyone I loved, now with this other Lunar and his friends, we will take you on," said Angelos.

"Try me," it said.

After that, it started to go for us. I really underestimated its size. A single blast from my weapon didn't make a dent. The creature went for Angelos first, but he was able to push it back just a bit.

"We got you!" said Lunar.

Everyone started blasting it with whatever attacks they had. Mayhem rockets, darkness, cannon blasts, fists, explosions, blasters, chemicals, blades, viruses, hacks, digital firepower, and more. We worked together to make sure nobody would get hurt.

"Evil Lunar, with me!" said Lunar.

"Alright!" he replied.

The two of them climbed onto the creature and did a double slam onto its back, which seemed to do a lot.

"Good work you two," said Max.

"Hopper, lead us in!" said Rocco.

"With pleasure," he said.

"Just like the good old days huh!?" asked Rocco.

"Oh boy, they are crazy," said Alex.

"Damn, my darkness barely has an effect. This thing truly is powerful," said Mayhem.

“Serum isn’t as strong or effective either,” said Mr. Grizz.

After launching more blows, the creature backed up for a bit. It looked weak, but then it opened its eyes which glowed. Suddenly, 8 huge dimension portals were opening behind it. We didn’t know what it was doing, but then things came out of it. I realized what was happening. It was summoning armies across other dimensions. There were Finley merge creations, Zero bots, Evil Lunar robots, Mr. Grizz serum creatures, Mayhem’s darkness creations, Dimentio’s bots, Tom’s microbots, and Kithara’s wonder fans.

“Deal with this, pests!” said the creature.

“Hey, that’s cheating!” said Dimentio.

“Wouldn’t you know about that,” it replied.

“Hey, they got a point,” said Zero.

“We took down all those once, now let’s do it again,” said Lunar.

“Here I am blowing up my own army, how ironic,” said Evil Lunar.

We had a good amount of crowd control, so it wasn’t a big deal, but it left us more vulnerable to the creature itself. Everyone was doing a solid job keeping the hordes at back.

“It’s gonna keep bringing them in, we have to close them!” said Lunar.

“Dimentio, take Lunar in,” said Angelos.

“Alright, let’s take you for another flight!” said Dimentio.

Dimentio flew Lunar up to the open dimension portals to start closing them with his own portal gun. We distracted the creature to make sure it didn’t notice. Things were going well, Lunar managed to close almost all the portals. Suddenly, the creature turned around, and slapped Dimentio out of the sky.

“Ahh!!” he yelled.

Xara caught him for a safe landing, but Lunar was grabbed by the creature. It started taking him for a flight while hurting him in the process. Lunar could barely do anything in its grasp.

“Oh no you don’t!” I yelled.

I charged up the fireball once again and sent it straight for the creature’s eye. It got a direct hit and dropped Lunar. Cherry saved him with her mech.

“Thanks,” he said.

“Anytime!” said Cherry.

Lunar got down slowly, but he was really weak. The creature leaped for us and knocked us all back, isolating Lunar.

“You really thought you could take on me? I CREATED this life!” it claimed.

We were all pretty scared now. Even Angelos looked nervous. Lunar slowly got up and looked back at us. We didn’t know what to do. It was always Lunar who got us out of these situations. The creature created a cage that slowly closed the platform in on us.

“Hey! Stop this right now!” said Kithara.

“Your pathetic wonder power has no effect on me,” said the creature.

Lunar was thinking hard, but I don’t know if he had any ideas.

“I was wrong. I’m sorry. I thought we could do it with everyone,” he said weakly.

The creature started walking closer and closer. We were almost out of the platform.

“So Angelos, this was your idea to revert my changes? I will have you all removed, then ALL OF THE DIMENSIONS TOO!” it said.

Lunar looked back at me, but I could only give a worried expression back.

“And you Lunar, you really fought your mortal self could kill me? Send me to the afterworld? You’re just a mortal, and that’s it,” it said.

Lunar suddenly brightened up a bit. As if he got an idea. He got up again and turned to face the creature.

“You’re right. I can’t send you there,” he started to say, “But I can take you there,” Lunar shot a blast to distract it and then took Kithara’s remaining wonder power. He combined it with some space powder and a rock he had and combined it with his super merge and rift gun. He then opened a huge rift portal that looked like the same one in the village when the void was happening. After firing a few more blasts and tackling the creature the best he could, he pushed himself and it right through the portal.

“Lunar!” I said.

“Son!” said Max.

“Noo! Said the creature.

Orion tried to run and get him but it was too late. Lunar and the creature went through the rift, only leaving behind a life sensor he had.

“What, what happened? Where’s Lunar?” asked Kailani.

“He took the creature away. He saved us,” said Angelos.

“No, no not again!” I yelled.

“This is his life sensor. I attached one on you Solar, and Evil Lunar,” said Max.

“What does it tell us?” asked Dylan.

“It tells us how healthy he is, it’s green right now,” said Max.

We waited there for a bit, hoping the Lunar would come back. Suddenly, the life sensor started to enter the yellow zone, and it was moving down fast. I held the sensor, hoping it would go back up, but it was hopeless.

“We have to help him. We HAVE to help him! Angelos can’t we do something?” I asked.

He thought about it for a bit.

“There’s a theory that if you put enough thought and emotion into a person you truly care about in the Astral Afterworld, you can give them energy and happiness and strength. It might let him fight back, but it’s only a theory, I can’t guarantee it will work,” he said.

“But we have so many people here that he cares about. We have to try!” I said.

“I’m with Solar, we have to do something,” said Sammi.

“Yeah! Lunar never gave up on any of us here,” said Via.

“He’s a good person. We can’t let his sacrifice go to waste,” said Augie.

“Alright then, everyone gather round together. Sit down and think hard about Lunar. Say what he taught us who we were meant to be,” said Angelos.

We did as he said. Everyone huddled up and thought long and hard about him. We took a bit to find out, but we started saying some answers.

“A captain,” said Augie.

“A lawyer,” said Liam.

“An idol,” said Tom.

“A father,” said Max.

“A friend,” said Alex.

“A hero,” said Finley.

“An assassin,” said Mack.
 “An admin,” said Xara.
 “A scientist gamer,” said Sammi.
 “A body guard,” said Orion.
 “A leader,” said Mayhem.
 “A program,” said Zero.
 “A developer,” said Julian.
 “A counterpart,” said Evil Lunar.

More and more replies came from everyone in the group. It was heartwarming to hear about how much Lunar meant to these people. I was still thinking of my response, but then I went for it last.

“A family,” I said.

A few minutes went by, I took a sneak peek at the life sensor, it was slowly going back up. I wanted to cry in joy, but I had to keep my focus. We managed to help him. Now it’s all on to you to finish the job little bro.

Chapter XIX (Lunar’s POV): Friends Never End

It was yet another landing into the Astral Afterworld, but I made it here again.

“Woah,” I said out loud.

I was wondering where the creature was, but then I realized I was sitting on it.

“What the, get OFF me,” it said.

The creature shook me off and then took a good look around.

“You brought me into my OWN AFTERWORLD?!” it said.

“I’m sorry I tried to finish this in the dimension space,” I said.

“Well then we’ll FINISH IT HERE!” it said.

The creatures charged towards me and pushed me right into another rock wall. It hurt, but I had to keep moving to avoid getting hit. This thing was fast, and was not letting me get out of its sights. My blasts from my super merge were the only thing I had left. Even though it didn’t hurt the creature. It was causing just enough distraction for me to get out with my life. I hopped onto a tall rock in hopes to get away, but the creature grabbed a hold of me and slapped me down onto the ground. It then began to start firing a powerful beam at me.

“Once your energy and will is mine again, I will get out of here to destroy everything else!” it said.

I was kinda in a bad spot. Pinned down and no energy left, I had to hope I did this for something good. The beam got stronger, but I felt so too. I felt some of my own emerging from inside me for some reason. The beam started to feel less painful, and I was even able to push it back a bit. The creature was confused.

“What?” it questioned.

Through some form of communication I could hear Solar telling me to give it my all. It was them. My friends were saving me through some emotional outpour. I knew it was my chance to make a comeback now.

“Sweet,” I said.

With one large burst of energy, I pushed back the beam and the creature itself. It got knocked far far back. The lighting in the Astral Afterworld changed as well. Instead of the gloomy green, it turned into a bright yellow blue color. It felt like I was the one in control now. The creature regained its footing on a nearby rock platform and looked at me. I had too as well. I was hovering in the spot with rejuvenated systems. I could really feel my AI powers now.

“Who are you!?” it asked.

“I’ve been wondering the same thing too,” I started to mess around with the new energy I had.

“Am I the son of a human family? The son of Max? An AI? A Human? Turns out, I guess I’m all of those things,” I said.

I finished messing with the energy to create a shape surrounding me. A crescent moon to guard me and enhance my attacks.

“I’m Lunar, engineer, friend to most, and most importantly, inventor of the Super Merge! Woah, this is so cool I mean just look at me!” I said.

The creature didn’t really seem to care for my new look, instead, it flew up and tried to attack me with another bite. I had so much speed and agility now, I grabbed its own leg and slammed it down onto the rocky mountains with my own moon. After that, I dived right down and let it feel the pain of my crescent. It got right back up and tried firing its beam again. No match once again, I could absorb it all and fire it right back at it. It looked tired now, but not just yet. I took it on a little goose chase.

“Get back here!” it said.

I turned around and got a hold of its tail.

“Time to take you on a ride!” I said.

I started zooming around the afterworld, making sure to slam the creature into any passing boulders I saw. I must’ve hit it at least 6 times before throwing it right into the heart of another mountain. It completely broke apart into pieces, leaving the creature sitting weakly on the ground. I used my super merge and used it on the creature and some nearby rocks to create a version of itself.

“Alright tag team. Let’s do this!” I said.

The creation I made went blow for blow onto the real creature.

“How do you like that huh?” I asked.

The creature tried defending itself as much as it could, but couldn’t dodge everything. My creation eventually broke, and I walked up to the creature. It was not feeling well.

“It took me 10000 YEARS to perfect my universe. I will take you out if it takes me 10000 YEARS more!” it said.

“10000 years to kill a mortal? Sounds weak,” I teased.

That angered the creature so much it came charging at me one more time.

“You want to kill me? Then take my energy!” I said.

I unleashed all of the new energy I got right into the creature, which it absorbed.

“Yes, finally! The power is mine!” it said.

The creature started to glow and wobble. I had this calculated right from the start.

“Wait, no. It’s too much. It’s too much!” it said.

Eventually, it started to glow even more and then finally burst out. I think I finally slayed this thing. A bright glow happened and blinded me. Moments passed. I woke up in a dock-like environment. The skies here were still glowing yellow blue. The water reflected it well. I looked around to see if anything else changed. And then I saw something incredible. There was another person standing by the dock. They looked cool, but I've definitely never seen them before. I slowly walked up to them.

"Hello?" I asked.

No response at first, but then I did get one.

"Hello, Lunar. My greatest creation," he said.

"Woah. Wait. The same voice. You are the creature?!? I can't believe it. You look extra shiny now," I said.

"You're looking pretty snazzy too," he said.

"I know right. I look extra cool now, and powerful. But who are you? A human?" I asked.

"I'm Divadus. The creator of what I call, the LunarVerse," he said.

"LunarVerse huh? You mean all those dimensions and canon events?" I asked.

"Yes, exactly. You've grown," said Divadus.

"Oh, yeah I know. I need to stop eating cheesecake every week," I said.

"No, grown up," he said.

"Oh! Oh yeah I have been through a lot," I said.

"I hoped you would grow as I sent you through all those adventures," he said.

"You mean, all those adventures, they were all canon events?" I asked.

"Yes, I made this for you. To go through wild adventures and live a good life, while meeting new friends along the way. That was my ideal vision of your world. Then I created even more dimensions with the same stories and people, with a different twist to keep it interesting. Such as people made of paper," said Divadus.

"That one was really neat. And this afterworld?" I asked.

"I made it so maybe one day, I could interact with the villains and stuff. I never expected it to transform into a heaven like place. But maybe this is better. It feels better now," he said.

"So you're like some kind of god?" I asked.

"One could say that. I was given the option to make my own universe. Because a universe needed to be created to populate this lonely world I had. I created a special character who could do it all and who I thought was the ideal person. I saw the person who would live a story that I would live. That was you Lunar. I made the canon events because I wanted the story to go a certain way, even if Solar dying was part of it," he said.

"Yeah, that wasn't sticking with me well," I said.

"So when Angelos broke that rule, it angered something in me. My perfect world was not going the way it was. I transformed into an angry creature, made up of all your favorite animals. Instead of watching the dimensions peacefully, I was aggressive and started attacking any dimension that broke my rules," he said.

"Yikes, that sounds awful," I said.

"It got worse. When you broke the event second, that really angered the creature within. I could still talk but my passive conscience was gone," he said.

"Wow, that is crazy," I said.

“But now, after realizing what I’ve done. I see that living life by a strict set of rules is unhealthy. Flexibility needs to be allowed, and I’m sorry for all the damage I have caused,” said Divadus.

“Well don’t worry about it too much now. I’m glad that I got all the answers I wanted,” I said.

“Thank you. Well, you’re truly my successor now,” he said.
Divadus took out a crescent staff and handed it to me.

“Woah! What is this?” I asked.

“A powerful creation I made. I didn’t know if any Lunar should have it, but you truly deserve it,” he said.

“I feel so honored, I don’t know if I can accept this,” I said.

“Take it, I have a bigger one,” he said.

I took the staff with ease and started playing around with it. This thing is awesome, I can't lie. Just holding it was making me feel powerful. He chuckled as I played around with it.

“Well now what do we do?” I asked.

“You tell me?” he started to say.

There was a flash and he started to disappear.

“Wait no, don't go!” I said.

The flash went away and I saw him sitting by a tree.

“I’m not going anywhere, I basically live here now!” he laughed.

“Oh, of course,” I said.

“You must decide whether to stay or not,” said Divadus.

“You mean, I can go back?” I asked.

“Sure you can. The staff has the power,” he said.

I turned around to face the water. With some instinct and swirling with the staff, I messed around enough to make a special portal in the water. I looked back at Divadus one more time to thank him. He wished me the best in my future. Without more thinking, I hopped in one last time. I can’t wait to show off this thing.

Chapter XX (Lunar’s POV): Next Moon Forever

There was a bright flash, and suddenly I spawned right above the energy platform. All my friends were there. They noticed me and celebrated my return.

“He’s back!” said Aidan.

“Let’s go! He did it!” said Louis.

“He really did huh,” said Mr. Grizz.

“You’re a tough one Lunar, I mean it,” said Thunder.

“Thank you guys. Max!” I said.

I ran up to give him a hug.

“You and Solar are the best things I’ve ever made,” he said.

“Solar, Solar! Where is she?” I asked.

She came right behind to give me a hug.

“Lunar! I’m so happy to see you! Never leave me again like that ever again!” she said.

“You helped me save me! I owe it all to you guys,” I said.

“Lunar, what happened to the creature?” asked Angelos.

“Well it turned out the creature was like a god. His name was Divadus, and he told me that I was the center of his perfect world. But he learned to let go, and now the canon events are a thing of the past. We can live how we want,” I said.

“Wow. You had the privilege of talking to him. Insane. Wait, where did you get that cool looking staff?” he asked.

“Oh! He gave me this as a gift,” I said.

“Of course he did. You did well, fellow Lunar. You reminded me what it was like to be young again,” said Angelos.

“Hold up, what do you mean fellow Lunar?” asked Archer.

He sighed. Angelos gave everyone the same talk he gave to me. Once he was done, everyone was more forgiving of him.

“So sorry to hear about that,” said Katrina.

“Yeah, but you’re ok now!” said Midnite.

“Thank you everyone. You’re not the same people I know exactly, but it sure does feel like it,” said Angelos, “I believe I owe you and Solar an apology,” “Hey man. It’s whatever now. You did what you needed to do,” said Solar.

“Lunar, the staff is quite fascinating. Your dimension knowledge must be amazing right now, could you teach me?” asked Dr. Gates.

“Sure thing! After all, you’re the main reason we could even connect through all these dimensions,” I said.

We talked amongst ourselves for a little bit. Kithara came up to me.

“Lunar, my wonder flower is going to expire, the effect will wear off soon,” said Kithara.

“You mean, Hopper is going to leave?” asked Rocco.

“Yep. Everyone who came from that world is gonna have to go soon kid,” said Kithara.

“It’s ok Rocco. I’m already grateful I got to see you. Don’t lose a limb out there,” said Hopper.

“I promise. For you brother,” said Rocco.

“Well Evil Lunar, it was nice to have a small chat,” said Max.

“Yeah, yeah I guess so. You got a good Lunar there,” said Evil Lunar.

“Right, I believe we all mistook the person Lunar is,” said Mr. Grizz.

“Eh, I don’t blame you all,” said Zero.

“Thanks for helping, bad guys. By the way, the afterworld is much nicer now. You should have a better life now!” I said.

“Thank you, that’s all I wanted,” said Dimentio.

“Sounds good Lunar. Thanks for taking me on one last adventure!” said Redgar.

“It was my pleasure to see you all. Don’t cause too much trouble,” I said.

“Can’t promise that!” said Mayhem.

Kithara used the seed, and canceled the wonder power. All of them returned back to the Astral Afterworld.

“Well now, I guess that means we finally did it!” said Oona.

“Yep, everything should be good now. No more risks of voids. We just gotta clean up our places,” I said.

“Say Lunar, what can that staff do exactly?” asked Jesse.

I took it for another whirl and fired a super powered blast out into the dimension space.

“Wow, that is strong. I’m never picking on you,” said Finley.

Angelos was once again standing in the corner of the platform.

“Hey, you’re not gonna celebrate with us?” I asked.

“I’m happy that we got a good ending. Now I’m not sure what to do. My dimension is still in shambles, but now there’s no reason to keep on the lookout for broken canon events,” he said.

“You can always come with us!” said Solar.

“Yeah, maybe you should stay as Angelos, but we’re happy to have you in our dimension,” said Max.

“You did a good job protecting us until now,” said Ruby.

“Wow, that is, amazing. Thank you. I hope I can redeem myself,” he said.

“Nah you’re chilling. I would’ve done the same thing,” said Kailani.

“Can we go home now? I’m exhausted,” said Clara.

“Yeah, let’s all go back and take a long deserved break,” I said.

I opened up a portal back home and sent everyone to their proper timelines and dimensions.

A few months passed by. All the voids in our worlds were now good and shut. Solar was no longer having visions. Things were actually starting to look good.

“Hey Lunar, get over here!” said Alex.

We were still hanging out with our AI friends in the real world. They would occasionally visit still.

“Guys, the ice cream is not leaving just chill,” said Gash.

“We want it now! It’s too hot,” said Solar.

“Yeah, I need my ice cream!” said Cherry.

“You’re right Gash, they’re just like kids still,” said Dr. Gates.

After finally getting some ice cream we finally sat down somewhere. Solar and I had a chat.

“Still thinking about Divadus. I’m honored to have been made into a good character,” I said.

“Part of that was you silly. You also worked hard to become the person you are today,” she said.

“Thanks, that means a lot. Love you,” I said.

“Love you too bro,” she said.

“Hey! Where’s my cone!” It was Angelos.

“Got it right here dude,” I said.

“Thanks, you know, I did get a nice house recently. Way better than my dark base,” he said.

“Glad to hear it!” said Cherry.

They went to play something. I sat here still and looked at the sky, thinking about my experience. It felt euphoric. I finally felt like I knew who I was. Maybe that's who the heck I am. Still, it was a lot for an AI to handle. Because it's not like you climb dimensional cliffs everyday.
